NDP CHARGES CONFLICT

Lau Admits Seeing Mining Bill Draft

FORMER Socred forests minister Ray Williston, as expected, was appointed B.C. Cellulose Co. president by Premier Bill Bennett Wednesday. He will operate separately from Forests Minister Tom Waterland, who also said Wednesday logging may be allowed in parks in an effort to boost employment: See stories on Page 3.

The NDP Wednesday demanded the resignation of Mines Minister Tom Waterland, charging that a director of a B.C. mining company helped draft the Socred's mining legislation.

NDP MLA Gary Lauk (Vancouver Centre) charged that Jurgen Lau, a Vancouver lawyer and director of Barrier Reef Resources Ltd. helped draft the Mineral Resource Tax Act and that Lau saw a draft of the legislation before it was presented in the legislature.

The act, introduced June 5, would repeal the controversial royalties placed on ore production during the NDP administration and impose instead a tax on only the profits of mining companies.

Lau, in a telephone interview from Vancouver, admitted he had seen a draft of the bill before it was intrduced.

"Of course I saw a draft of Bill 57. I helped in drafting the legislation,'" Lau said.

But, he said, as a mining solicitor he had also seen the NDP's Mineral Royalties Act before it was introduced.

He called the conflict of interest charge made by Lauk "utter nonsense."

The demand for Waterland's resignation came towards the end of two hours of acrimonious debate.

Waterland refused during that time to answer at least 40 opposition queries on whether Lau had attended a meeting May 13 during which the draft of the legislation was discussed.

Lauk finally produced a signed statment by a mines department solicitor who attended the May 13 meeting, saying that Lau had also been there.

When asked by NDP leader Dave Barrett why he had not answered the questions, Waterland said: "I chose not to."

Waterland sat quietly, flanked by two department officials, during most of the NDP charges.

He said finally that he had not known the May 13 meeting took place and said outside the house later he didn't know if it was proper or not.

The minister defended Lau, saying he was a professional person whose personal ethics would preclude him from using his knowledge of the upcoming legislation for his own or his company's personal gain.

"It is only a conflict of interest if he uses it to his personal gain," Waterland said.

Lauk said the new mineral legislation will "line the pockets of the mining presidents . . . with funds which properly should go into the provincial treasury."

He said he doubted that Lau was in on the drafting of the NDP's Mineral Royalties Act, but said if he was, it was a different case because the NDP legislation imposed harsher taxes on the mining industry and the Socred legislation could be used to its advantage.

Lauk said Lau's conflict of interest was heightened because one of his fellow directors on Barrier Reef Resources is B. J. Reynolds, executive vice-president of Bethlehem Copper, one of the largest of B.C.'s mining companies. Reynolds is the son of Patrick Reynolds, Bethlehem's president.

"If Mr. Reynolds had even the tiniest chat with fellow director Lau about the work he was doing for the minister . . . he had, every

Air Strike

OTTAWA (CP) — Air traffic controllers served notice today that they will strike across the country at midnight Saturday if authorized as expected by a membership vote to be counted Saturday.

The federal government has already warned the controllers that it will not tolerate a strike that it considers illegal.

Enraged Blacks Burn, Loot, Riot

Police surrounded the town and brought in armored cars to crush the worst violence in South Africa in 16 years.

The riots also spread to another black enclave. Police officials said several hundred blacks in Kagiso township 20 miles east of Johannesburg began looting shops and wrecking beer halls late today. A force of some 40 policemen was standing by but took no immediate action.

Police said at least 32 persons had been killed and 250 others injured, 69 of them with bullet wounds, in two days of rioting.

Four whites were stabbed or stoned to death.

The violence was the worst in South Africa since 1960 when police killed 69 black rioters in one afternoon in Sharpeville.

In Johannesburg, motorcycle gangs of whites rode into a peaceful protest march by whites and blacks and scattered them with "chains, broken bottles and clubs," according to witnesses.

The march to City Hall by a group of about 1,000 white students of the University of the Witwatersrand and black supporters was to protest the police action in Soweto.

They carried banners saying Your Kids Next.

When the marchers tried to regroup and resume the protest police waded into the peaceful march and dispersed them with baton charges in which an undetermined number were injured and arrested.

Black smoke curled over the area and police said the rioters embarked on a "pillage" of stores and had burned administration offices.

Circling air force helicopters sprayed teargas on the mobs but a strong wind nullified its effect and it failed to quell the arson and looting, police said.

Police said they repulsed one atack by rock-throwing and knife-swinging demonstrators who attempted to storm the Baragwanath Hospital for blacks on the outskirts of Soweto.

Scores of buildings were gutted and at least 40 trucks overturned and burned. Transport services were suspended and police cordoned off the entire area.

South African army units stationed three miles from Soweto were placed on alert. About 1,200 black and white police were inside the enclave trying to restore order.

Soweto police chief Col. Johan Greber warned whites to stay clear of the area. Scores of roadblocks were erected.

Whites in suburbs a few miles from Soewto were warned to stay at home.

Postoffices throughout the area were closed and least one was gutted. Bus services which carry thousands of black commuters to Johannesburg daily, were stopped.

BLOCK BLASTED

Thousands of gallons of gasoline spewing from a ruptured pipeline ignited in West Los Angeles Wednesday turning a busy business block into a blazing inferno.

Four people were killed and more than 20 injured in the blast and resulting blaze which happened after a street-widening crew's excavating machine accidentally pierced apart the buried pipeline feeding a Standard Oil distribution depot at 16,000 gallons a minute under 600 pounds per square inch of pressure.

An automatic alarm cut off the spewing gasoline in two minutes but it took 25 companies of firemen more than an hour to bring the blaze under control, leaving the block little more than a ravaged ruin.

CONSUMER BACKED BY COURT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Judge J. G. Ruttan of the B.C. Supreme Court ruled wednesday that the province's Trade and Practices Act gives rights to consumers that over-rule a signed contract stipulating no guarantees or warranties.

Judge Ruttan in his precedent-setting decision awarded $1,000 to Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Findlay of Chilliwakc, who purchased a car on an "as is — where is" basis, only to have it break down five days later.

Michael Hanson, director of trade practices, appeared on behalf of the consumer in the appeal against Beywood Motors of Vancouver. The original action was dismissed in small claims court.

Judge Ruttan was told the Findlays bought the 1968-model car Dec. 6, 1974, because they needed reliable transportation for daily trips on the freeway between here and Chilliwack. Five days later the engine blew up and had to be replaced.

They had signed a sales contract that stated, "this vehicle is sold on an as is-where is basis, with no guarantees or warranties of any kind".

Judge Ruttan said in a written decision he was satisfied Findlay could not possibly have contributed to the engine's disintegration and that the sale, during which he was assured the car was in good running order, appeared "as clear case of breach of the seller's fundamental obligation to deliver an article reasonably fit for the buyer's disclosed purposes."

He said the Findlays had intended to have the car checked by their own mechanic, but were dissuaded from doing so because they were told the firm's mechanic had given the car a compression test and passed the motor as fit.

Drug Cases Decrease

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of persons convicted in 1975 of offences concerning marijuana and hashish decreased to 27,367 from 29,067 in the previous year, the federal health department said Wednesday.

In a news release, the department said 25,056 of the 1975 cannabis convictions were related to simple possession of the drug.

The number of known new heroin users also declined in 1975 to 887 compared with 1,261 in 1974, while the number of new concaine users known to the department increased slightly during the same period to 419 from 393.

FRENCH PUSH

TORONTO (CP) — Jean Chretien, federal treasury board president, says it should be compulsory for students entering university to speak both official languages.

Addressing a local Liberal meeting Wednesday night, he stressed that education is a provincial responsibility and it is not for the federal government to impose its will.

"What burns me is why we're not making it compulsory for everyone at university entrance to be bilingual."

Gauthier Going On Carpet

OTTAWA (FP) — Anti-Dumping Tribunal chairman Patrick Gauthier has been recalled from Europe to discuss with Finance Minister Donald Macdonald allegations that he has been carrying on private business activities around the world while holding a senior government position.

Macdonald was in Washington with Prime Minister Trudeau Wednesday, but it was learned that his executive assistant, John McNicholas, interviewed another anti-dumping tribunal member accused of carrying on private business activities while on the government body.

Conservative MP Sinclair Stevens York-Simcoe had produced other documents Tuesday alleging that tribunal member A. L. Bissonnette had been involved in business dealings with Gauthier and international financiers.

Bissonnette denied having any pecuniary interest in business ventures involving Gauthier, and suggested the chairman was only preparing for his retirement from the tribunal at the end of this month. The chairman's original seven years appointment in 1969 was extended for six months in January of this year.

An official of the Anti-Dumping Tribunal said that the chairman was in London when he was recalled by the finance minister.

He said Mr. Gauthier's trip to Europe "was supposed to be partly holiday and partly business."

Envoy's Killers Held by PLO

BEIRUT (CP) — Palestinian guerrillas and their leftist Lebanese allies announced the arrest today of a number of persons suspected of killing U.S. Ambassador Francis Meloy Jr., his economic counsellor and their Labanese driver.

Meloy, 59, Robert Waring, 58, and Zoheir Maghrabi were shot Wednesday while driving through the no-man's land between the Moslem and Christian sectors of Beirut.

The announcement by the joint Palestinian-leftist Lebanese command did not identify the suspects, say how many there were or give their nationalities. However, it implied they were Arabs and said they will be turned over to the pan-Arab peacekeeping force which the Arab League proposes to send to Lebanon.

In Washington, U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said today the United States will decide "in the next 36 hours" whether to evacuate Americans from Lebanon.

In testimony before the House international relations committee, Kissinger appeared to rule out the possibility the U.S. might intervene militarily in Lebanon as it did in the 1958 crisis with a full scale marine landing.

"We would be facing substantial force requiring significant U.S. force," he said. "Our judgment is that such intervention would unify all elements, except the Christians, against the United States, incur heavy casualties and lead to an open ended commitment," Kissinger said. Kissinger said "no final decision" had yet been made on evacuating Americans from Lebanon or whether to plan a military or non-military evacuation operation.

"If U.S. personnel are used," Kissinger said, "it will be a very short operation. We will of course consult with Congress."

U.S. officials in Washington said they believe the killers are from a Moslem fringe group which hoped to unify squabbling Arab factions by provoking U.S. intervention in the Lebanese civil war.

JUNK MAIL LATE

VANCOUVER (CP)—Some mail heading for Vancouver from eastern Canada is being delayed for at least three days because the post office prefers to sort it out in Winnipeg, Peter Whitaker, postal union local president, said Wednesday.

"Right now (Wednesday afternoon), according to our people in Winnipeg, there are 22 containers of mail in their yards there addressed to Vancouver," Whitaker said.

He said each container carries anywhere from 700 to 1,400 bags of mail, indicating the large amount of Vancouver mail being held up for sorting at Winnipeg.

Whitaker said the delayed mail is mostly third or fourth class and the Winnipeg diversion does not apply to assured or first class mail.

He described it as "business" mail, although householders usually refer to it as "junk" mail, most of it coming from such eastern centres as Montreal and Moncton.

A Vancouver post office spokesman said the mail in question is being sorted in Winnipeg to relieve congestion at Vancouver and to enable the post office to meet its assured and first class mail schedules.

TOP B.C. STUDENT

Subsequent plans may call for an engineering degree at the University of B.C.

Chesshire, 18, was awarded a $250 prize last week for placing first in a province-wide physics competition organized by the Simon Fraser University physics department on behalf of the Canadian Association of Physicists.

Dr. John Cochran of SFU personally presented the award at Oak Bay's awards ceremonies.

The three-hour special examination was a tough one. The average mark for the 136 students writing it was 37 per cent. Chesshire obtained 85 per cent — 10 per cent more than the runner-up.

Fellow Oak Bay student, Jeffrey Zeit of 1844 Kings Road, received an honorable mention in the same competition.

Dr. Cochran said the exam was not based on the high school curriculum and students could only answer successfully if they used common sense and if they had done extensive reading outside their assigned texts.

Fish for Weeds in Elk Lake?

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Stocking of a large herbivorous fish is being proposed to control the growth of weeds in Elk-Beaver Lakes.

The fish is the Chinese grass carp, which grows to a length of four feet, with a weight of up to 70 pounds.

Regional district parks and recreation committee will discuss the proposal at its next meeting June 32.

Expensive weed-cutting machines have been used in the past and poisons are currently being considered as operating costs of weed cutters steadily increase.

But the state of Arkansas has solved its weed problem by stocking lakes with this "miracle fish" that can daily eat up to four times its weight in weeds and algae — not an inconsiderable amount, since the four-foot adult can weigh up to 70 pounds.

Several years ago 20,000 of the carp, also known as the white amur from the Manchurian river where it has been cultivated for hundreds of years, were released by Arkansas state biologists into a weed-choked, 6,700-acre bog called Lake Conway near Little Rock.

Scientists wanted to make sure the amur's ravenous appetite would spare enough vegetation for resident wildfowl and wouldn't hamper the growth of indigenous sports fish.

"Lake Conway was just one of about 100 lakes in the state that is now totally cleared of submerged weeds since we stocked them with the white amur," Bill Bailey, a biologist with the Arkansas Fish and Wildlife Commission, said in a telephone interview.

Bailey said there had been no significant change in population of other species of fish and that as long as waterfowl

New Hospital at Least 4 Years Away

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

A new 250-bed general hospital on Helmcken Road near the Trans-Canada Highway is four years away at the very least, hospital planning director John Clark said today.

A minimum two years for drawing plans is needed followed by two years at least for construction, he said, and those "super-optimistic" estimates would only be valid if there are no hitches along the way.

The regional Hospital and Health Planning Commission reluctantly agreed Wednesday night to the 34-acre Helmcken site, which, ranked eighth among the final nine properties considered in recent months for the hospital.

While several commission members and others involved, including planners and doctors, have said plainly they think it's a bad choice, a majority of the commission made it equally plain Wednesday night that they are convinced the provincial government has forced them to it.

The consensus: more argument with the province will just produce more delay and prove fruitless.

The commission, which is responsible for planning and co-ordinating regional hospital development, has been stalled for months over choice of a site for a hospital intended to largely replace obsolete Victoria General Hospital.

It's first choice has been a 25-acre property at Douglas and McKenzie, which would have cost an estimated $2.5 million. But Helath Minister Bob McClelland has remained firmly opposed because of the cost, saying he would not support the usual 60 per cent provincial cost sharing beyond a top land price of $1.25 million.

The Helmcken property on the other hand will cost about $525,000, which is $15,000 an acre in contrast to the $100,000 an acre the McKenzie-Douglas property would have cost.

McClelland has pushd the Helcken site just as hard as he has opposed the McKenzie-Douglas choice. The province bought an option on the former and offered it to the region with the health minister saying if it was accepted he would issue the necessary government approvals "the next day."

In a letter to the commission Wednesday night, he also agreed to the province paying 60 per cent of certain off-site servicing costs if they were exclusively for the new hospital.

Regional planner Peter Hammer told the commission last month he opposes the Helcken site because it's alongside an already congested traffic corridor (the Trans-Canada Highway), with no sign of the province ready to move on proposed widening.

In addition a hospital on that property infringes on greenbelt and runs counter to both the official regional plan and the View Royal community plan.

McClelland in his letter says he understands the widening has a high priority with the highways department.

The Helmcken site while in View Royal is alongside the Saanich boundary and would require road improvements there too. A preliminary estimate of servicing costs before the commission shows $360,000 for road improvements on Burnside, $70,000 needed for Little Road and $10,000 for Helmcken Road.

The alternatives for sewer servicing of the land range from $344,000 to $642,000.

While the choice is sure to please regional directors from the western community, who wanted a hospital closer to their corner of the Capital district, it leaves doctors among others unhappy.

The vast majority of doctors in the district see the Helmcken site as "a very poor one" for the new hospital, said a letter from Dr. Alastair Baird, president of the Victoria Medical Society. They are mainly concerned about access and the distances involved.

"My society is also deeply concerned that the future hospital building in the city is so disseminated," he wrote. "The construction of two hospitals of 75 (Saanich Peninsula) and 250 beds (proposed by the province at Helmcken) respectively and to reduce Victoria General (now at 430 beds) to presumably about 200 or even 150 beds is replacing a general hospital with three cottage hospitals.

"It is well known that hospitals of these sizes are very poor administrative economic units. The adequate staffing of these three units will be inefficient and services will be unnecessarily reduplicated."

While regional hospital planners have been thinking in terms of a 350-bed hospital initially on the new site, capable of expanding to 500 or even 600 beds later, McClelland indicated last month there is only enough funding available to start with 250 beds.

In another letter before the commission Wednesday night, Dr. John Dickson, chairman of one of its advisory committees, said he fears the region is moving towards building "a medical disaster."

He suggested a sufficiently large hospital (400 beds) should be built, either on the St. Ann's property alongside Victoria General, or at Helmcken but with provision for doctors' offices to be built in the neighborhood.

Maintaining 150 beds or so at the old Victoria General while building 250 new beds elsewhere won't work in his view.

An 11th hour suggestion last month by Dr. Baird, that the UVic campus be considered for the new hospital, also died Wednesday night.

Baird had suggested that the eventual establishment of a medical school at the university made a hospital there a sound move but one paragraph in McClelland's letter showed his disinterest.

"I would suggest that the possibility of establishing a medical school at the University of Victoria sometime in the future should not influence or delay the development of the new general hospital for the Capital region," the health minister wrote.

Next and possibly final consideration of the hospital site question will be by the regional board next Wednesday when it will probably be asked to ammend the regional plan to permit it.

reason to be confident (about Bethlehem profits)."

During the telephone interview, Lau said he had talked to Reynolds about the tax legislation.

"The members of the committee went to interview various representatives of mining companies," he said.

Lauk said later that Bethlehem had paid to the B.C. treasury $2.3 million in royalties and taxes during the 1973-74 taxation year. He said he had figured it out that if the Social Credit legislation had been in effect during that period, Bethlehem would have paid slightly less than $700,000.

Trading in Bethelehem shares has risen sharply since February, Lauk said, the time Lau started his work on the legislation.

Waterland was also urged by Liberal leader Gordon Gibson to give the NDP an answer to whether Lau had seen a copy of the draft legislation.

Gobson said a taxation bill should be considered the same as a budget bill and be completely confidential until it was introduced in the house.

Lauk read out a list of 16 Socred MLAs who own shares in mining companies. The list included Victoria MLA Sam Bawlf, who owns shares in Charta Mines, but Bawlf said Charta is an Alberta company which does ot operate in B.C. Lauk read out a prospectus for Charta which showed that it had claims in the province and said it could move into B.C. "tomorrow."

Fish for Weeds in Elk Lake?

nest in reeds that stick above the surface, there is no problem since the amur cannot feed on stem plants that rise vertically from the bottom.

"We have been exceptionally pleased with the results. We really don't have a lake weed problem in the state of Arkansas tny more," he added.

Word of the carp was brought to local attention by Victor Woods, a Victoria outdoors enthusiasts who discovered an article on the fish in an old Reader's Digest he was leafing through recently.

He sent the article to Victoria mayor Mike Young who in turn fowarded it to the parks and recreation committee of the regional district.

The amur is reported to be not only a good weed controller, but also as wily a game fish as the trout, as scrappy when hooked as the tarpon and as tasty as the red snapper.

It is also touted as being a potentially better protein source than beef.

The amur has also been found to be an effective mosquito control — mosquito larvae need the protection afforded by submerged vegetation.

The voracious fish thrives on pondweed, coontail, duckweed, milfoil, reed and sedge. Older amur have even been observed with their heads out of water nibbling grass on pond banks.

Younger fish have a sweet tooth for filamentous algae — the plant that feeds on nutrients in sewage and farm nitrates and which can infest a lake in no time.

Bailey said in colder climates, the fish might eat a little less and not grow as large but he could not forsee any other problems if they were used in Canada.

He did point out, however, some states have banned the fish, fearing a possible overpopulation problem.

But one solution for this would be to follow a program currently being used by the U.S. Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife where lakes are stocked with only one sex — usually female — so no spawning will take place.

Studies show the fish will graze for 12 to 15 years in the right environment.

Air Canada Layoff

WINNIPEG (CP) — Air Canada Wednesday announced a suspension of operations at its Winnipeg-based finance branch, plagued by a string of work stoppages for more than six months in an unresolved labor dispute.

Members of the bargaining unit were told not to report for duty until further notice.

Michael Chochrane, vice-president for finance and planning of the publicly-owned airline, said the step was taken "with great reluctance." His statement added:

"Over 250 serious work disruptions in the last six months — including rotating strikes, slowdowns and other activities — by contract employees have forced the company to readjust its work processes and work allocations within its finance operation."

Sydney Rowing Show Gets Underway July 1

Anything that floats and is propelled by paddles or oars will qualify for this year's Great Sidney Rowing Review.

Rowing shells, canoes, gondolas, rubber dinghies, or log rafts can enter providing they are properly equipped with lifejackets and pass the inspection before the start of the race.

This year's race, beginning at 9 a.m. on July 1 at the foot of Beacon Avenue in Sidney, is expected to attract as many as 100 boats crewed by men, women and children of all ages.

Cash prizes and trophies will be awarded to winners of numerous boat and race classes, and $100 has been offered to anyone who can beat 71-year-old John Newman, overall winner for the past four years.

Logging May Be Allowed in Parks, Waterland Says

Logging may soon be allowed in parks in an effort to boost employment, Forests Minister Tom Waterland told the legislature Wednesday.

Timber in the southern half of B.C. is totally committed, he said, and each time part of the industry's quota is removed, jobs are eliminated.

He said B.C. is blessed with millions of acres of parke and wilderness and the province can no longer afford to alienate land for single use, such as parks.

"The two (industry and recreation) can be compatible," he said, adding as B.C.'s population grows, more jobs must be provided.

The question of parks was raised by Jim Chabot (SC—Columbia River), who said he supports parks, but the people of southeastern B.C. are losing in the job market because too much land has been committed for park use.

The provincial government has committes a total of 222,000 acres in Columbia River as parkland or wilderness reserve and there are also more than seven million acres of national park in the area.

"We don't want any more parks," Chabot said. "We don't need any more.

"We want jobs . . . we want to make a living in my constituency."

During debate on his departmental estimates, Waterland said the forest industry in B.C., historically the province's biggest money maker, is in serious trouble.

Waterland said B.C.'s $45,000 International Woodworkers of America members are the highest paid forest workers in Canada, but their wages are still below those of supermarket workers in the province.

Loggers are expected to exert tremendous physical energy, he said, and they deserve a better return.

The only way of increasing wages for forest workers is to boost production, which has dropped about 30 per cent in the past three or four years, the minister said.

"We really do have serious problems," he said. "I don't have instant answers."

Direct revenue to the province from stumpage dropped to $35 million in 1975 from $248 million in 973, he said.

Environmental constraints and recently-introduced logging guidelines have imposed additional hardships on the timber industry, he said, and there also is a heavy surplus of pulp logs on the coast and wood chips in the interior.

Waterland said if costs continue to outpace production at the same speed, only B.C.'s best quality limber will be marketable "in the not-too-distant future."

Williston Heads B.C. Cel

The rumored appointment of former Socred resource minister Roy Williston as president of B.C. Celluose Co. was confirmed Wednesday by Premier Bill Bennett.

Bennett said Williston's appointment is effective immediately. He replaces Ray Jones, who resigned earlier this week.

Bennett also announced that B.C. Cellulose and other related companies will be "separated entirely" from the administration of Forests Minister Tom Waterland, The premier said Williston will report directly to him.

This means that Mr. Williston will assume additional duties over those held by his predecessor in that he will accept responsibility for general administration. This responsibilty was formerly held by the minister," Bennett said.

The reorganization will allow Waterland to deal with B.C. Cellulose as he would any other forest company, Bennett said.

Opposition reaction to Williston's appointment was swift.

"It's an outrage," said NDP MLA Gary Lauk.

He called the appointment "crass politics of the worst possible order" and said the NDP would oppose it all the way.

Lauk said Williston was a director of the B.C. Railway when it was accused of deliberately hiding its true operating costs from the public.

The NDP spokesman said the appointment is a set-up to have Williston oversee the sale of B.C Cellulose to private enterprise and predicted the profits of the company would "sink" under his management.

B.C. Cellulose is a government-owned holding company and retains the shares of Canadian Cellulose and has some financial responsibility with Plateau Mills, Kootenay Forest Products and Ocean Falls.

Williston was minister of lands, forests and water resources for 16 years under the W. A. C. Bennett Socred administration. He was defeated in the NDP sweep election in 1972.

After his defeat, he became general manager of the New Brunswick Forest Authority, a position he resigned from last month.

"Forest administration has always been a challenge to me, but this appears to be the greatest challenge of all," said Williston.

"It is my belief that a crown agency should set the example for excellence of operation. However that is going to be very difficult to do in this province, where private enterprise has such an outstanding record."

B.C. WON'T ACT ON GAS PRICES

Premier Bennett is not prepared to do anything to roll back a two-cent-a-gallon increase in the price of gasoline at self-serve stations.

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) asked the premier in the Legislature Wednesday if he would request the B.C. Energy Board to roll back that price, but Bennett said the price freeze on gasoline is at the refinery level.

Macdonald said the big oil companies, which own most of the self-service stations, were evading the price freeze at the refinery level by increasing the price at the pumps.

Bennett said service stations were not included in the price freeze on advice from the B.C. Energy Commission that competition at the pumps was keeping the gasoline price down in B.C. at a time when it was increasing elsewhere.

There was no interference, he said, so as to preserve free competition in the province.

The government, he said, had no intention of doing anything about the price increase.

Free Ferries But . . .

Senior citizens who travel free on the B.C. Ferries under the new rate structure don't get a free ride when they board the ferry by bus, Transport Minister Jack Davis explained Wednesday.

A regular passenger travelling from Vancouver to Victoria by bus pays a total of $6.25 — $2.25 for the bus ride and $4 for the ferry.

But senior citizens who are supposed to be exempt from the $4 ferry fare Monday through Thursday, pay $3.50 instead of only the bus fare of $2.25.

Davis said the reason for the extra charge was that all bus passengers must split the $29.70 cost of putting the bus on the ferry, senior citizens included.

He said senior citizens riding the bus are still paying less now than they used to under the old rate structure. The old rate for bus and ferry was $4.25, but it is now $3.50 for the seniors, the minister said.

New Forms of Federalism

Like a bunch of greedy little boys haggling over the division of an apple pie, provincial premiers and the federal government debated financial arrangements in Ottawa on Monday. When it was all over Tuesday they sheathed their knives and went home in a bad mood, from all reports. This meeting was just the opening round of a new federal-provincial debate on taxation sharing. When debate is resolved solutions engendered may lay groundwork for constitutional reform, if and when agreement is reached on bringing the British North America Act home.

Yet onlooking taxpayers are excused if they quake at what Prime Minister Trudeau airily refers to as a "new form of federalism." What emerges from the prime minister's latest euphemism is a plan whereby provinces would be given more taxing powers as Ottawa decreases federal contributions to health care, university education, and perhaps other shared cost plans. As Trudeau explained it to the provinces: "... You'll get the thanks for the money you spend and you'll get the blame for the taxes you raise." The last phrase is the key one.

If Ottawa diminishes its dollar-for-dollar cost-sharing on hospitals and higher education, the provinces will have to raise taxes considerably to maintain current standards. The naive may think federal taxes will diminish if Ottawa reduces its share of these expensive cost-sharing programs. In fact, the Trudeau administration is committed to a several-billion-dollar defence refit plus the prospect of increasing unemployment insurance payouts as jobless totals rise in response to anti-inflation restrictions. Government spending will increase 16 per cent this fiscal year, according to Finance Minister Macdonald. In simple terms, the Canadian taxpayer is going to be hit harder at both federal and provincial ends in future.

Higher taxes are as inevitable as winter in Canada. But any new division of taxation powers in the increasingly loose Canadian federation should be carefully wrought with the burden on individual taxpayers kept carefully in mind. In this first joust over a 40-year-old problem governments failed to reach agreement on what would replace the equalization grant system whereby Ottawa provides funds to the seven poorer provinces on an agreed per capita average. A proposal by the Trudeau administration to end revenue guarantees — an $800 million program over the next three years that balances provincial shortfalls resulting from 1971 income tax changes — was also unanimously opposed by the provinces.

While this meeting was only a preliminary step in what is going to be a long drawn out process it indicates a new federal attitude. Not only will Ottawa be lessening its authority in an important constitutional area, some provinces may be tempted to use new-found taxing powers indiscriminately in a never ending pursuit of higher revenues. As all these first ministers hover around the pie flashing their knives, it is also ironic that so much energy is expended on simple division when little thought or energy is directed towards using the tax system for redistributing wealth. Only the federal government's equalization payment system, soon to be replaced, tackled this question in regional terms. Not one federal politician or provincial premier has discussed it in individual terms. The 1961 Carter tax commission gathers dust on a shelf, a monument to political fear and indifference. At this initial stage the only thing Canadian taxpayers can count on is paying more taxes.

Fun With Figures

Education Minister Pat McGeer had his begging bowl out in Ottawa this week at the federal-provincial conference. He wailed that British Columbia has been "short-changed" on the amount it receives from the federal government to finance post-secondary education.

By his calculations, the province has lost $44.2 million in the past five years and the loss will total $100 million by the time the present program is phased out. Over the nine years since the present shared-cost program of financing higher education has been in effect, B.C. has lost out on some $291 million that should have come our way.

It would have, if Ottawa had been paying the provinces on a identical per capita basis, says McGeer. Yes, but it wasn't. What-might-have-been is a game for children, not politicians. The minister's reasoning is rather specious. It's like saying only if Gavrilo Princip hadn't gone and shot Archduke Franz Ferdinand at Sarajevo the entire 1914-18 unpleasantness would have been avoided.

The fact is we shortchanged ourselves. The federal-provincial agreement of a decade ago on financing post-secondary education may indeed be more generous to the other provinces than to B.C., Ontario, New Brunswick and PEI, since grade 12 is the dividing line for post-secondary education in the latter four jurisdictions and grade 11 is elsewhere.

But that's a peripheral issue. The financing formula is a matching one, meaning Ottawa pays the provinces a dollar for every dollar they spend. If they set their spending low, the matching grants from Ottawa are similarly small. Just like that old business maxim, you have to spend money to make money.

For years, under the W.A.C. Bennett Social Credit government and the Dave Barrett NDP administration, B.C. lagged behind in per capita spending on education, medicare, hospital care and the figures prove it. This year, we are tied with poor have-not Newfoundland and New Brunswick at $211 per capita spending in those areas. Only PEI is lower, at $200. Quebec is spending most in these areas — $262 per capita — followed by Alberta at $247 and Ontario at $238. So under the formula the provinces that spend the most themselves get the biggest matching grants from Ottawa. That's how it works.

Calling a press conference to tell the folks back home how B.C. was supposedly short-changed in the past is shrewd politics on McGeer's part but it isn't a very helpful or particularly lucid contribution to the crucial debate on the future of Confederation — in which this federal-provincial conference was the opening round. It's one thing to blame the feds, another entirely to distort your own history.

Glad Hands For Joe

Fresh from a two-day Washington visit where he talked to everybody who is important Conservative leader Joe Clark blew into Victoria Wednesday for a breathless visit.

During his five and one half hour stop here he held a noon rally in Centennial square, mainstreeted, talked to the press and held a crushing reception in the Empress before he flew off to Vancouver.

It wasn't that he said anything new. In fact he managed to say very little of substance — a disconcerting trademark of this new boy.

If the Victoria visit was an exercise in the political blahs, Washington, the day before was something else, indeed. During his stay there he met and spoke to Democratic Senators Hubert Humphrey, Adlai Stevenson, Treasury Secretary William Simon, Commerce Secretary Elliot Richardson and State Secretary Henry Kissinger.

Political Heavyweights

This phalanx of political heavyweights does not deign to talk with most visiting firemen, especially a new kid from up north. In a very real sense it was an unprecedented welcome for a Canadian opposition leader in Washington, as Clark was pleased to admit here.

To cap it all, a scheduled 15-minute meeting with President Ford stretched into 45 minutes. The White House had apparently asked that television cameras not record the meeting, but Clark fortuitously brought along his own photographer, who's glossy pic. just happened to show up on the CBC national news Tuesday night.

What makes all this oval office fuss over the boy from High River even more intriguing is that Prime Minister Trudeau began an official Washington visit a few hours after Clark lit out for Victoria.

Now the U.S. state department has a large protocol department. It knows chapter and verse of the niceties surrounding visits by heads of state and opposition leaders. The president of the U.S. does not tarry with opposition leaders without seeking advice from the Canadian desk at state.

It is also well-known that meetings with U.S. presidents cast a certain glow on the guest, a political advantage as it were. Whether Washington's glad handing signals a sigh of relief would issue forth if Trudeau were defeated in the next election is mere speculation, of course.

But the Trudeau administration's foreign policies, especially in the fields of energy, defence and investment have gnawed at Americans considerably, as shown by the congressional record and a huffy goodbye party thrown by the former U.S. ambassador to Canada, William Porter. Not since John F. Kennedy pencilled an expletive about John Diefenbaker on the margin of a position paper has this official mistrust been so publicly evident.

"There is a real perception there, as here, that my colleagues and I have a good chance of forming a government ..."

He added that he may well be the first Canadian opposition leader to visit the U.S. capital who is leading the Gallup poll with 43 per cent of the electorate behind him. Asked if he thought U.S. hospitality for him on the eve of the prime minister's visit might be construed as interference in Canadian affairs, Clark replied, that "hospitality to a visiting politician did not constitute interference."

Fun and games at the press conference.

Yet there are inherent dangers in this sudden U.S. discovery of Clark. A warm Washington welcome might indicate Americans view the Tory leader as a man who would reverse some of the symbolic nationalistic legislation enacted by Trudeau's administration. Laws, it could be said, the majority of Canadians appear to support, if only to keep warm.

More than three months after winning the Conservative leadership Clark is still being feted at home and abroad, although a certain disillusionment seems to have affected the press. It must also be said we still know very little about him.

Busily campaigning around the country he is asking citizens and premiers alike about their concerns. We know he favors a more co-operative federalism and fewer unilateral central decisions. We know he favors a fair review of crown corporations to ascertain their usefulness in the modern world. We know he is kicking around a hypothesis about the universality of programs such as family allowances. But that's about all we know.

After three months Canadians can't expect him to have cogent alternatives to Liberal policies. But if Clark can capture 43 per cent of the Canadian electorate, as shown by the latest Gallup poll, on the basis of winning a political convention and a few speeches the Liberals must be fearful.

Liberals Fearful

Taking a leaf from U.S. Democratic candidate Jimmy Carter's book, Clark is long on generalities and short on specifics. In Centennial square he told a crowd of 700 mainly elderly people how the Tories would recreate that sense of excitement about Canada during Expo.

He also said he had a firm respect for the capacity of provincial and municipal governments. And close to the end of all those platitudes he apologized for being so serious.

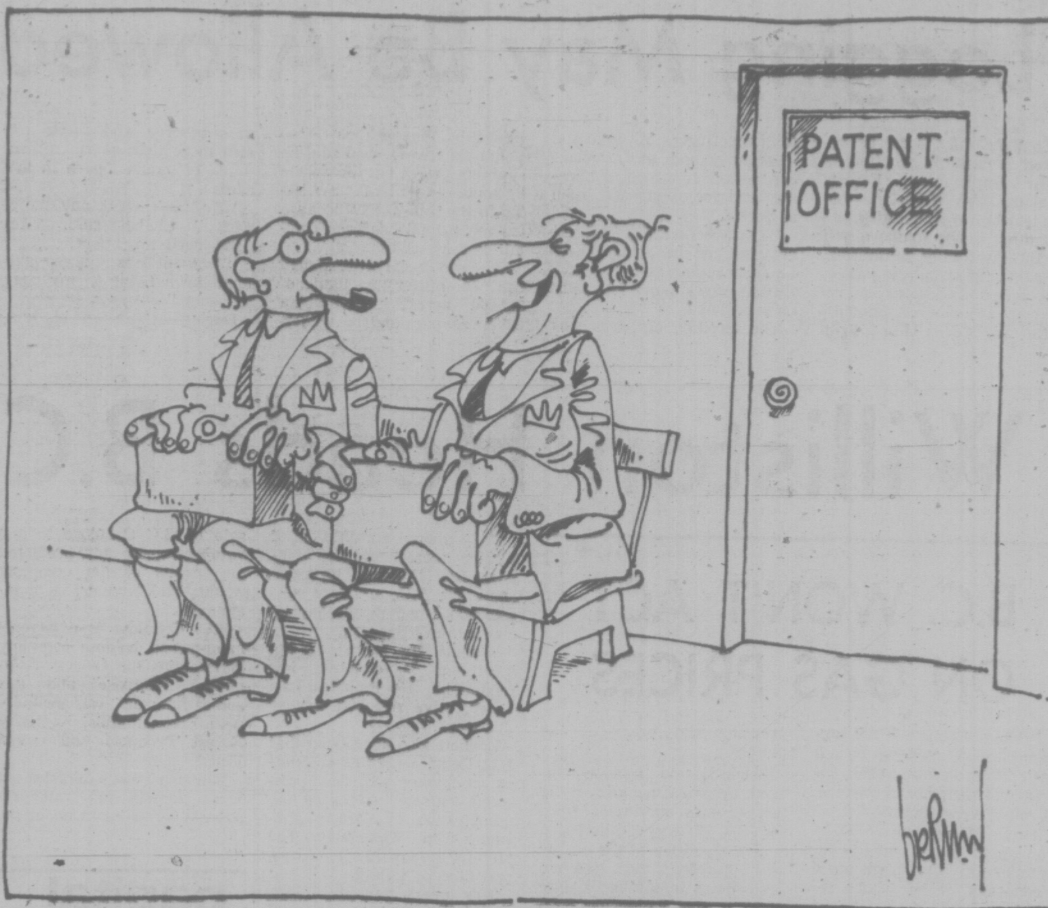
Despite his relative youth he is a thoroughly professional, sophisticated politician who is already on the campaign trail. Yet too many echoes of Sinclair Stevens and Paul Hellyer can still be heard. It is time Clark cleared the bats from Conservative caves and told Canadians exactly where he would take us this next decade.



"... I'm really going to cash in this year ... I've invented a summer game that you can only play in the rain ..."

RICHARD GWYN

He Bootlegs the Money

OTTAWA — Like all cabinet ministers these days, Manpower Minister Robert Andras is faced with the problem that there's no money lying around to spend on his bright ideas. Unlike most of his colleagues, Andras seems to have found a solution. He's cutting back in one area, and using the money thus recovered to start up new, and hopefully better, programs in another area.

The formula seems trite. It's novel, though, because in the past the government was able to afford, or thought it could afford, to throw money at all its problems.

To find a comparable example you have to go back to 1970-71, when restraint again made inventiveness a necessity. Then welfare minister John Munro proposed the legislation didn't pass the Commons to double the family allowance rate to those earning $4,500 or less, and to pay for this, not out of additional funds but out of money "saved" by eliminating family allowances to everyone earning $10,000 or more.

Procrustean Bed

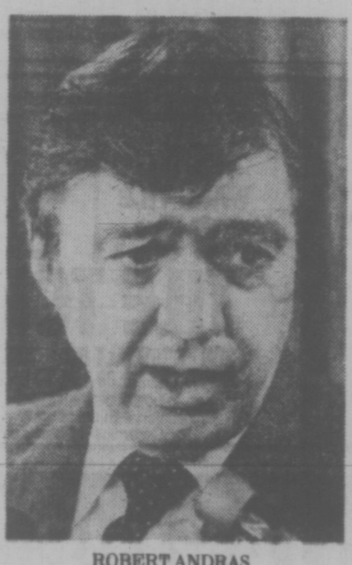
Andras is making the same attempt to escape from the Procrustean bed of universal social security schemes. By cutting back on the unemployment insurance program, chiefly by raising the minimum qualifying period from eight to 12 weeks, (only a proposal now) Andras expects to save $200 million. This money he then will spend to create jobs that will eliminate the need for unemployment insurance payouts.

That's the broad concept. Andras' specific idea, aside from summer student programs and the rest, is what "topping off" which means using the funds to close the gap between what an indivdual would draw on unemployment insurance and what he or she would earn if employed. This selective approach, Andras believes, will stretch out the $200 million far further than if all the money was just pumped out to create new jobs.

Direct job creation, the government has discovered, is inordinately expensive. To lower the national unemployment rate from seven per cent to a respectable five per cent would cost $2 billion. Also, it is inefficient: Andras' studies show that municipalities and provinces have often used federal job creation funds, such as those provided for winter works, to substitute for budget expenditures they had to make anyway.

Three examples of how "topping-off" could work:

- A company has to lay off staff. These surplus employees would remain at work, would receive their regular unemployment benefits and in addition would be paid a "topping-off" supplement to bring their wages back to their normal level.



ROBERT ANDRAS
... it's called topping off

- Unemployed workers who take manpower training courses would receive the same supplement in addition to their training allowances.
- Where nothing else is available, direct job creation would be tried, but with a difference. The jobs themselves would involve community projects, much like the existing Local Initiatives Program, but on year-round basis. Those hired would be individuals already receiving unemployment insurance, who then would receive additional payments to raise their total earnings to the equivalent of local wage rates.

On paper, the idea seems sound. One defect is that to work it has to be closely supervised. That increases the administrative costs, and the number of bureaucrats.

Another drawback is that six months ago, in order to prove to the public that it was so cutting back its spending, the government junked two programs that created precisely the kind of community-based jobs that Andras now is talking about — Opportunities for Youth (OFY) and the Company of Young Canadians (CYC).

The destruction of OFY and the CYC for the sake of the public relations gain of the moment, was probably the single most cynical act perpetrated by this government.

The deed now is done. The issue is to prevent its repetition. Restraint easily can be mindless; even more easily, because they have so little political clout, it can be imposed mainly upon the poor.

Hit Middle Class

Andras may have found the right formula. The New Democrats have attacked his unemployment insurance cutbacks as "callous," "cruel," and "cynical." Good stuff for the barricades, except that Andras has managed to bootleg the same amount of money, to the same people, down another street.

It's a trick that Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde, for one, needs to learn. He's gotten nowhere with his $350 million program to supplement the incomes of the working poor. The reason is he proposes to take the easy way out by spending new money. Lalonde's prospects would change if he raised the money he needs by, say, lopping off family allowances to those above $15,000 or by reducing the tax deduction for dependent children which benefits, principally, those with high incomes.

Lalonde's challenge, of course, is a lot tougher than Andras—to find the funds he needs Lalonde would have to hit the middle class, while Andras by his unemployment insurance cutbacks will hurt mainly the poor. To solve that problem, Lalonde will need some of Andras' political inventiveness. For a start, if the middle-class objects, Lalonde can point out that it, and not the poor, has been demanding restraint of the government.

Housing Problems

We would need the expertise of a lawyer and the avarice of the real estate developers to solve the housing problem today. I have neither, but I'll give it a try. I have learned of one angle that is probably the biggest cause.

While working as a motel clerk, I realized that the majority of customers were single-parent families. Do you realize that for every broken family we lose the sum of three houses? "Wrong," you say. Listen!

A few years ago when a woman left her husband, she went home to mother. Now, mother is living a new lifestyle in high-rise apartments with all the recreation facilities, and no worries, also no children. "It says here, it's not even recommended for children," says the taker of Anacin. "No room at the inn," says the world.

So welfare puts a women and two or three children in one home, or apartment, and the husband finds a bachelor suite and the inlaws are in their own. Three leases, right? No wonder there is a housing shortage, and no wonder the prices are sky-high.

Supply and demand is the healthy way to run a business. Why then, do developers insist on building plush condominiums that few can afford and few can buy, because of the no-children clause.

Why hasn't the city built good, clean, solid mobile home parks? If they can do it in the United States they can do it here. The jerry-built parks here are a disgrace, and a far cry from the neat, trim villages of the U.S.

Why haven't the real estate boards been included in the eight per cent guidelines? Why are they privileged to charge all the market can bear, for their commissions?

To finish off this little tirade; houses that are old and have been depreciated on the tax forms should not be sold for three times their worth. Landlords who do no work on the property, not even a paint job in three years, should not be allowed to raise the rent unless all repairs are taken care of. They might also give an incentive to poor tenants, by keeping the rents down, if the tenant co-operated in keeping his home clean and undamaged. — John Tyndall, 12—723 Field Street.

Pool Perils

I was inspired by the article from the other day concerned with the cost of swimming at Crystal Pool as opposed to more economical pools offered by other municipalities. For example, in Esquimalt pool you get a swim for 85 cents and in addition you may have a good chance to get your personal effects stolen from a locker. It happened to me on June 11.

After no more than 15 minutes of a relaxing swim I found my locker broken in, my pants with all personal effects missing. There were only five teenagers in the locker room looking for adventures and vigorously supported by an exotic-looking leader and their behavior and faulty language made me uneasy to leave my personal effects even in a locked locker, but what I thought would happen only with a slight chance became a reality.

Five boys disappeared including their dark leader. A nice lifeguard rescued me from walking home without my pants by finding them in a garbage can without any great effort because he finds the rest of personal effects of other ripped-off recreationers.

For me this was my last swim at the Esquimalt pool and cannot understand why there is no security to prevent ongoing robberies by criminal teenagers. The whole pool is run by teenaged lifeguards and teenaged cashiers who don't have enough authority to prevent crimes committed by criminals of equal age.—M.S., Victoria.

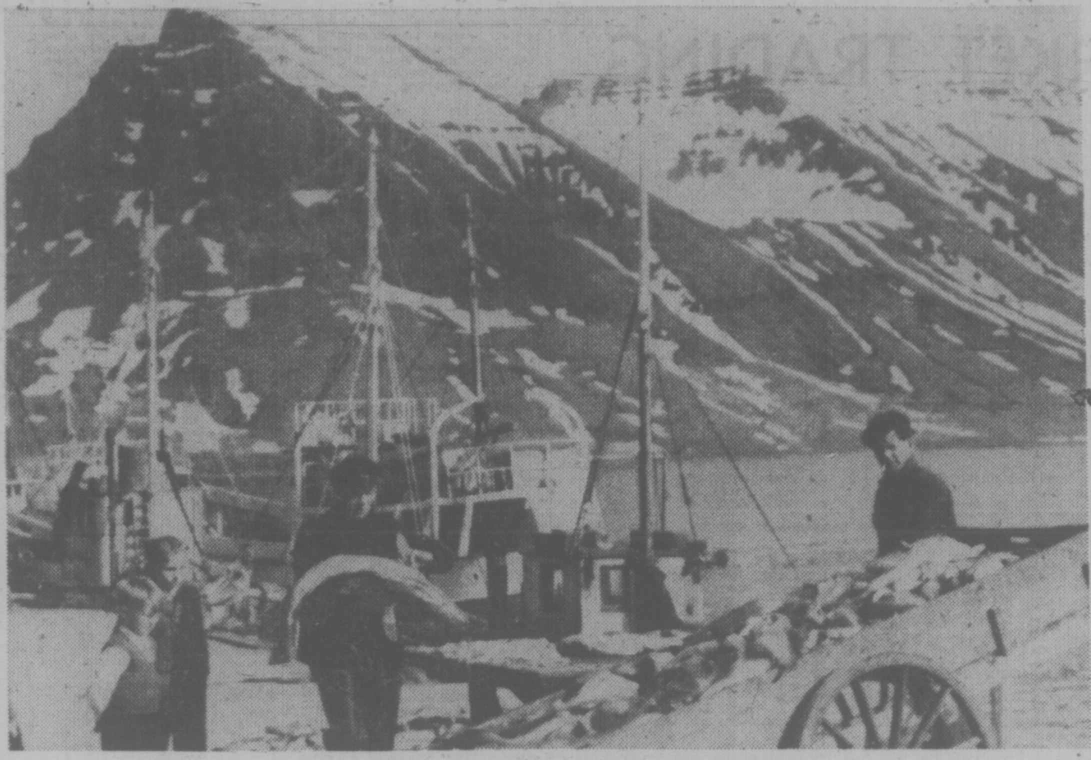
'Poor Britain Didn't Have A Chance'

Iceland Won Cod War Despite What Law Says

By PATRICK O'DONOVAN
London Observer



Iceland's fishermen whipped up nationalist fury

Britain has just lost another war. The miniscule community of Iceland on its beautiful but inhospitable island has beaten Britain over the use of what Iceland claims are her own private fishing grounds.

With a singular lack of grace, the Icelanders have claimed victory. The British, who have had some success at making the best of a bad job, have called it a victory for common sense.

The war was a small one and basically absurd. Fishing for the valuable cod that goes to make the jewel in the centre of Britain's fish and chips, was a tough and dangerous trade. Men got caught in the trawling gear. Men got washed overboard. Ships got so heavy with ice topside, they tipped over.

In this dispute Britain appeared to have an overwhelming case. The Icelanders had unilaterally declared a 200-mile fishing limit off their complicated coast. The English had international law on their side. This law is likely within the year to be changed by the Law of the Sea conference. But no matter.

All that the Icelanders had on their side was world opinion and the certainty that Britain would not extend its full strength. There was the emotive reality of the fact that Iceland depended utterly upon its fishing for its survival as a nation or an inhabited place. There was the David against Goliath image. There is the fact that the world admires Iceland for its hardiness and success and its ability to hold strong drink. There was the fact that behind the British insistence on the law lay the trades union interest of 6,000 seagoing and quayside jobs and the natural concern of the Labour Members of Parliament for the deep fishing ports — one of whom (Tony Crosland) is now foreign minister and bravely signed the instruments of defeat which in fact are a six-months agreement to allow a meaningless amount of fishing in Imperial Iceland's waters.

Any half-baked ninny of a foreign correspondent could have predicted the outcome of this dispute. This apparently infinite ability of trades unionists and interested politicians to deceive themselves must be taken as a factor in public judgment. If one can overcome one's decent prejudices, the Press tends to be a better judge than the experts, and that includes the most exquisite members of the diplomatic corps.

But this defeat may be of some value to the world. The fact that Britain had International Law on its side was made much of by those who had a vested interest in getting the cod back to the fish and chip shops and the housewives. But International Law has become a broken reed to be carried before any act of international injustice. It counts for nothing in the United Nations, before the demands of nationalism or the needs of the poor.

It has never worked in Albania, in Cyprus, in Tibet, in Indonesia. Britain and the United States have interpreted it for themselves. France has merely found it a tiresome interference. It has never worked in Africa, black or white. It had no effect on Iceland, which worked itself up into a lather of nationalist fury —and for nationalism read self-interest throughout. More than that the dispute with Iceland was in conflict with the interests of the United States, NATO and the European Economic Community. It was poor little Britain that never stood a chance and has lost a packet of money over a deal that could have been settled a year ago on more favorable terms. Again as any half-baked ninny of a foreign correspondent could have told anyone listening in a public bar.

At any time the emaciated British Navy could have blown the Icelandic gunboats out of the water. There was never any serious question of doing this. The result of this barren cod war merely confirms a new principle: war does not succeed unless you are parepared to go to the end of frightfulness and unless, in your interest, you only take a passing interest in international opinion. And only a few nations are prepared to do that. If you want to win against anyone nowadays, you must use every last weapon in your box and every dirty trick in the book and justify your claim with a thin coating of morality above a thick stodge of ruthless self-interest.

The Americans broke these rules in Vietnam — and lost. They nearly lost, too, in Korea. Britain lost again and again in its futile resistance to anti-colonial movements. Victory, now, is not to the strong. It is to the utterly unprincipled — and also to the elegantly weak. The very fact that they do not profess principles, or at least not those descended from the ideal of Christendom that confers an extra power upon the ruthlessly strong or the decently weak.

Thus the Russians could put down uprisings in East Germany, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Hungary and the world only tut-tutted. In Vietnam there was demonstrated the powerlessness of omnipotence whenever any of the rules are observed. But when they are completely broken, they leave on the horizon a cloud no bigger than the dignity of man.

But the laws can be extended. Middling Powers are equally impotent before the smaller Powers. Britain, for example, could not present any real threat, military, economic or diplomatic, to little Iceland. The United Nations is an anti-western Union and would not even have asked Iceland to wait on the outcome of the Law of the Sea conference. To the descendants of the rickety ideals of the West, the advantage is to the small, the vulnerable and the determined.

This is perhaps an advance for civilization. Britain's defeat and Iceland's cries of "Victory" have cast no gloom here — except perhaps upon the new foreign secretary who is Member of Parliament for a deep sea fishing port. One only hopes that the civil servants and experts who rule the rulers have noticed how profoundly the rules of the Great Game have been changed. We will not cease to quarrel among friends, but we will do so with increased care. Even those who do not obey the rules may have learnt a little. But those few completely outside the law have still to learn and, if it comes, it will be more terrible and dangerous than the silly and unnecessary humiliation suffered by Britain.

What Price Hit-And-Run?

By JIM BERNATH

(A letter to the editor of the Sun)

I would like to draw your attention to circumstances that have received practically no follow-up attention from the press but which at the outset roused a good part of the whole city.

I refer to a year ago in June when three teen-age girls were walking on Willingdon near BCIT and a car drove right up on the sidewalk, struck and killed one, and drove off.

The press, radio, and TV took it very seriously at the time and steadily circulated descriptions of the car. Citizens showed concern too and supplied leads to 120 cars for police to check out. Officers were very diligent and canvassed service stations miles away. In the end a tow-truck driver found the car, and the driver turned out to be a single male age 32.

Evidence in court was that the driver was travelling in the centre lane on Willingdon but veered out of it across the inside lane, then across the parking space lane, and, with both hands on the wheel and looking right at them drove up onto the sidewalk, struck two of the girls and drove off.

The fatally injured child was thrown 100 feet or more, and there were related sidewalk skid marks for 65 feet. Witnesses on Hastings Street were disturbed to see the car being driven while the front fender was so bent and scraping against the tire and made note of it.

The driver's explanation in a statement to the police was that he had not seen any girls at all, that he was reaching for his sunglasses and thought he had hit a post.

The judge found this driver not guilty of criminal negligence as charged, nor of dangerous driving, and observed that in the absence of evidence of drinking or speeding it was an example merely of "inadvertent negligence," or carelessness.

At his appearance for sentencing on the hit-run aspect it developed the driver already had a conviction for hit- run (1974), that he had a record of other "traffic offenses mostly relating to drinking." The judge observed that "all of your difficulties with the law apparently stem from the use of alcohol." Nonetheless he dispensed only a suspended sentence with probation for two years. There was no fine, no suspension of licence.

Two months ago, April 8, this same driver was in court once again concerning a hit-run accident. There was a stay of proceedings on the hit-run and nothing came of it. He was involved with impaired driving also, however, and his licence was suspended for 18 months. He was fined $350. If he does not pay in 90 days, he will be put in jail for a week.

From the foregoing horror story two conclusions emerge. One, while it will be a good thing to have a "buckle up your seat belt" law, it will not be good enough if the driving of some of us can be so gross before we are taken off the road. Two, perhaps hit-and-run should be taken more seriously, with a penalty as severe as whatever you could have been charged with had you stayed. Then the offenders might be short-circuited earlier, and just as well.

'A Recognition of Reality'

By GEOFFREY STEVENS

OTTAWA — After waiting for six years, the federal government finally dropped the other shoe this month—when External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen announced that Canada will establish a 200-mile fishing zone off its coasts by next January 1.

The government has had the power to declare a 200-mile fishing zone simply by passing an order-in-council ever since an amendment to the Territorial Sea and Fishing Zone Act in 1970. That the government did not move earlier, despite mounting political pressure from the fishing industry, reflects, I think, credit on the government and its determination to seek a solution through international negotiations, rather than by unilateral action. That it finally did declare the 200-mile zone was a recognition of reality. Mexico has enacted legislation establishing a 200-mile fishing zone; so has the United States (its 200-mile zone comes into force next March 1). For the Canadian government to have stood alone in North America against a 200-mile zone would have served no useful purpose.

The decision to go to 200 miles is perhaps best viewed as a move which complements other Canadian efforts. It complements, for example, the bilateral agreements Canada has been negotiating with other fishing nations. Agreements have been signed with Norway, Poland, the Soviet Union, Spain and Portugal, in addition to an agreement with France which dates to 1972. These agreements will cover 88 per cent of the foreign catch within 200 miles of Canada's coasts.

The 200-mile fishing zone will—assuming the government can find some way to patrol it—give a tool to enforce the agreements. Canada will determine how many fish of the various species can safely be harvested in any given year and will permit fishermen of other countries, by agreement, to take quantities surplus to Canadian needs.

Had the Canadian government declared the 200-mile fishing zone even one year ago, the action would, I think, have had a harmful and disruptive effect on the United Nations Law of the Sea negotiations. Now, however—particularly as it comes after the American announcement—Canada's decision could have a small beneficial effect. It could help to mobilize the negotiators when the Law of the Sea Conference resumes in New York on August 2 by underlining the impatience that many countries feel over the slow pace of the discussions and by making it plain that the stakes are so high for major coastal nations that they have no choice but to go it alone, if necessary.

MACEACHEN
. . . 200-mile zone

However, it should be stressed that, although fishing is the most urgent issue as far as Canada is concerned, a 200-mile fishing zone falls far short of realizing many other vital Canadian interests—some of which may, in the long run, prove more important.

A 200-mile fishing zone is not the same as a 200-mile exclusive economic zone. A fishing zone establishes no rules of passage for foreign ships plying Canadian waters. It gives Canada no power to enforce pollution standards on passing vessels. It gives Canada no control over marine scientific research undertaken by other nations within 200 miles of Canadian shores. It does not win international recognition for Canada's claim to sovereignty in the Arctic Ocean. Most important, a 200-mile fishing zone has nothing whatsoever to do with the petroleum and minerals of the seabed. Declaring a fishing zone in no way advances Canada's claim to ownership of the non-renewable resources of the continental shelf, not only within the proposed 200-mile economic zone, but all the way out to the continental margin (a distance of 600-plus miles at one point off the east coast).

Nor does declaring a 200-mile fishing zone do anything to meet the needs of the landlocked and geographically disadvantaged states (there are 52 of them). These nations are seeking a guaranteed portion of the fish stocks in the economic zones of their coastal neighbors, plus a share of the non-renewable resources. The 52 won't get everything they want (their chances of getting their hands on the non-renewable resources within their neighbors' economic zones seem pretty slim). But they are going to have to be given something they can live with.

If not, there will be no agreement on the economic zone concept. Canada, in that event, would be left with a 200-mile fishing zone—which is a good deal better than nothing but a long way short of the optimum.

The Trudeau Capers

By GARY LAUTENS

Every so often Prime Minister Trudeau disappears for 24 hours. All his office will say is that he's enjoying a "private" day, so naturally Canadians are dying with curiosity.

Where does the PM go? What does he do? Does he say, "Shazam!" and vanish in a puff of smoke, or is it a trick done with mirrors?

Golly, no one knows.

After some thought, I've come up with several possibilities.

1. Prime Minister Trudeau is up in the mountains, examining the entrails of a reporter to see what the future holds for his administration.

2. Prime Minister Trudeau is busy in the basement at 24 Sussex Dr., chiselling out his next speech on stone tablets.

3. Prime Minister Trudeau is helping Margaret with the ironing.

4. Prime Minister Trudeau is in Defence Minister Richardson's garage, building the kites that will form Canada's Atlantic anti-submarine patrol now that the Lockheed deal has fallen through.

5. Prime Minister Trudeau is visitng relatives on the planet Krypton.

6. Prime Mnister Trudeau is at his summer cottage attempting to start a fire by rubbing two cabinet ministers together.

8. Prime Minister Trudeau is knitting a muffler for Elmer McKay's mouth.

9. Prime Minister Trudeau is giving Jean Marchand driving lessons.

10. Prime Minister Trudeau is busy writing Senator Keith Davey's memoirs.

11. Prime Minister Trudeau is vacumming the pool at 24 Sussex Dr.

12. Prime Minister Trudeau is on the phone telling Premier Bourassa that he's sorry but he doesn't have an extra $900,000,000 to spare 'til payday.

13. Prime Minister Trudeau is holding secret meetings with the RCMP, the results of which will not be revealed to the public until the early editions of tomorrow's newspapers.

14. Prime Minister Trudeau is home suffering an attack of Alberta gas.

15. Prime Mnister Trudeau is down at the labor temple drawing moustaches on posters of Joe Morris.

16. Prime Minister Trudeau is taking Margaret out to lunch, trying to persuade her to take him along on her next tour of South America, Cuba, Europe, etc.

17. Prime Minister Trudeau is attempting to talk the bailiff out of seizing Quebec.

18. Prime Minister Trudeau is at Berlitz learning to say "shove it" in 17 different languages.

19. Prime Minister Trudeau is at Mirabel airport still waiting to present a bouquet of flowers and a scroll to the 100th person to use the $500 million facility that opened six months ago.

20. Prime Minster Trudeau is in his study trying to learn the name of the Leader of the Opposition.

New York

AT NEW YORK the stock market advanced sharply in active trading Thursday, bearing down once again on the 1,000 level in the Dow Jones industrial average.

The Dow average of 30 blue chips was up 11.05 at 999.67 at 2 p.m., and gainers held a 3-to-1 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Dow has crossed 1,000 briefly a half dozen times this year and last closed above that point at 1,001.10 on May 13.

Brokers said there were several favorable influences behind the gains. For one, they noted continuing moves by the federal reserve board that seemed to be aimed at keeping interest rates from rising any further.

In addition, analysts pointed to positive trends that showed up Wednesday in U.S. government reports on housing starts, personal income and industrial production.

NYSE volume reached 17.09 million shares by mid-afternoon, up from 13.89 million at the same point Wednesday.

Montreal

AT MONTREAL prices were mixed in moderate trading. Volume at 2:30 p.m. was 431,600 shares compared with 659,500 shares traded up to the same time Wednesday. Massey-Ferguson Ltd. was up ⅜ at $29½, Imperial Oil Ltd. A ⅜ at $23½ and Inco A Ltd. ⅜ at $34¼. Walker-Gooderham and Worts Ltd. was off ¼ at $3¾, Moore Corp. Ltd. ⅛ at $4 and Shell Canada Ltd. ¼ at $17⅝.

London

AT LONDON mining issues, particulary those of heavyweight South Africa gold producers, were sharply lower in moderate trading on the London stock market Thursday. The Financial Times Index fell 6.5 to 378.5 at mid-session trading. It later rallied and closed at 379.8. Canadian issues eased fractionally. Analysts said the drop in mines was caused by news of civil disturbances in South Africa.

Gov't Takeovers

LISBON (Reuter) — Nationalization of four major Lisbon dailies—Diario de Noticias, O Seculo, A Capital and Diario Popular—has been completed, the government said Wednesday.

The Smith Boys Can Find It

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Bob and Dave Smith, who founded Urgent Industrial Supply Inc. four years ago, say their theory is that if an item has ever been manufactured, it must be available somewhere.

The company, which began supplying bearings and now finds all kinds of industrial items for companies everywhere in the world, was once asked by Walt Disney Enterprises in California to find a bearing for a children's amusement ride.

The brothers said such requests are almost everyday occurrences now that they have established a reputation for rapid service and delivery.

"We feel ours is the only business of its kind in Canada or the United States," Dave said as he leafed through a large stack of orders, many of them from North America's largest firms.

"The company called Wednesday and said they wanted 20,000 of these bolts by Friday and we went to work on it," he said. "By Friday, we had 12,000 of the bolts in the plant and they had come from all over North America—we must have had 20 planes in the air carrying bolts."

On another occasion, a company in England asked for a specific kind of bolt. Urgent found it in France and had it shipped to England within hours.

"We don't take no for an answer; we keep trying," Bob said. "Once we were looking for a specific item and phoned Australia to find it."

The idea for the business came up when Dave worked as a purchasing agent for a city hardware supply firm, and Bob was with a bearing supply company.

"Dave and I noticed that at least 50 per cent of requests placed through a normal wholesaler couldn't be supplied immediately," Bob said. "There was too much complacency in the business—customers often had to wait a week, two weeks or even a month."

They founded their company with the idea of supplying industrial items and materials as quickly as possible. Now, even if an item is obsolete, the firm will have parts manufactured, Bob said.

U.K. Economy Reports Damning

By DONALD MacDONALD
Times London Bureau

LONDON — Two reports with tough messages are helping to dampen the unjustified euphoria kindled in some sections of British life by the recent lifeboat Operation Sterling launched by Canada, other members of the group of ten central bankers and the Bank for International Settlements in Switzerland.

One report comes from this last-named bank, whose Basle headquarters has issued an annual report that is brutally frank about Britain's economy.

The other report is by Britain's national economic development office and gives a bleak outline of the growing disparity between 1945 and 1972 of the British and West German economies.

tThe Bank for International Settlements was set up in 1930 to handle transfers for the European Payments Union. Despite the disappearance of its original function it has evolved in the intervening years into the Central Bankers Bank, garnering immense prestige in recent years because its assessments have so often proved correct.

This year's annual report says bluntly that Britain must, within the next six months, slash public spending and introduce effective monetary and financial policies.

Further tax increases in Britain are not regarded as the answer because taxation already has exceeded the "limits of economic efficiency."

Cutbacks in public sector borrowing requirements are described as the only way out of the vicious circle of inflation and exchange depreciation.

The one ray of sunshine is the government's successful incomes policy agreed with the powerful unions, called "most encouraging" unquote by the bank.

The six months by the bank is connected with the Sterling Lifeboat Operation, in which $5.3 billion was made available to the Bank of England to steady sterling after its recent headlong plunge.

Details are given for the first time of the loan's terms, which make the credit available for three months at five and three-quarters per cent, with renewal for a further three months possible. Sources in Basle say more than $700 million of cerdit already has been used by the Bank of England.

The most telling comparison comes from the national economic development office report shows that in 1955 Britain had 22.9 per cent of the world trade in manufactured goods to West Germany's 19.2 per cent. By 1973 Britain's share had shrunk to 7.5 per cent while the West German share had risen to 22.4 per cent.

The report also shows that annual growth rates of labor productivity in every sector were higher in West Germany than in Britain. In paper, printing and publishing for example, British labor productivity was growing at 1.8 per cent while West Germany's was 3.8 per cent.

Traditional explanations are rejected, such as the one that the structurre of West German industry itself explains its faster growth.

The report finds that in distribution of employment and capital stock, in pattern of exports and in relative weighing of industrial sectors the two countries are similar.

Nor is the difference in the rate of investment accepted a valid reason, despite West Germany's admitted higher development rate.

Instability of government policy also is rejected as an excuse for British poor performance. The report finds that West German industry has also suffered instability including the notoriously-unstable automobile industry.

The main problem, says the report, is that British industry has shown such a remarkable resistance to change that government efforts to change national demand management patterns have not had the desired effect.

Until this resistance ends, Britain's industrial decline will continue.

Price Jump Seen For '77 Trucks

DETROIT (UPI) — Price hikes of 6 per cent can be expected when 1977 model trucks go on sale this fall.

General Motors has begun sending price protection letters to its Chevrolet and GMC truck dealers telling them they can expect up to a 6 per cent increase. That's in line with figures mentioned by top automotive executives who predict increases on cars and trucks in the 4 to 6 per cent range.

Financial analysts surveyed earlier this spring said they believe new car prices will rise this fall by 4 to 5 per cent, or about $200 a car.

The price protection letters guarantees dealers that they can write orders for 1977 models and know that if the price is more than 6 per cent higher than the comparable 1976 model, they won't have to pay the difference. If the final price hike is below 6 per cent, there will be an adjustment.

Ford Motor Co. said it was preparing similar letters to its dealers while Chrysler said it still hasn't begun preparing the price protection letters. Sources indicated the Ford letter would put the price protection at around 4 per cent.

The GM letters explained the 6 per cent protected price to dealers this way:

"The iterim price assurance level will permit you to continue your present sales momentum as well as provide an opportunity to convert to 1977 model - light, medium and heavy duty trucks those customers who could not be accomodated with 1976 models."

Institutions Controlling Property

TORONTO (CP) — Institutional investors are taking control of the Canadian property industry as their counterparts did in Britain about 15 years ago, says Robert Hawkins, Canadian partner in a British firm of chartered surveyors.

Hawkins, of the firm of Debenham, Tewson and Chinnocks, said in an interview the Canadian industry will eventually face the same problems British property companies now are encountering.

The growing involvement of governments in regulating real estate is creating a complex industry, he said. Development may only be undertaken by large institutions with enough financial resources to weather delays and setbacks caused by regulation.

"I only wish that Canadian politicians would study what has happened in other countries," he said. "The Canadian market is changing more than people realize."

Toronto Firm Flying High

TORONTO (CP) — Spar Aerospace Products Ltd. of Toronto, a little-known, highly-skilled firm, is making a name for Canada in space exploration.

Attesting to its world-wide renown is a framed tribute hanging on the wall in the foyer of the firm's sprawling but nondescript plant on industrial Caledonia Road in the west end.

Signed by James Fletcher, administrator of the United States National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), it is dated February, 1974, and reads:

"In appreciation of dedicated service to the nation as a member of the Skylab team which extended man's knowledge and capabilities in space."

Spar equipment — stem antennas and booms — was used on all 13 of the U.S. Gemini missions and on the Mercury and Apollo flights.

Four of the Russian probes to Mars carried Spar stem antennas, probably the first North American firm to take part in Soviet space ventures.

Spar units also have been used in the space program of Britain, France, Germany, Japan, Norway and Russia.

Specialists in remote manipulator systems, Spar recently won $19.8 million in contracts to supply such systems for the U.S. space shuttle program.

Incorporated in 1967, Canadian owned and other more than 800 employees, expertise is not limited to space work.

The company has a major business in the repair and overhaul of aircraft. It is manufacturer of high-precision gears and transmissions and is doing important research on linear induction motors for tracked vehicles what will some day be used at high-speed commuters in Canada's major cities.

Responsible for Spar is tall, stately Larry D. Clarke, chairman, who was vice-president of planning and administration with de Havilland Aircraft of Canada Ltd. when he decided to shoot out on his own.

At that time Spar was a division of the de Havilland operations. Although the division was doing about $5 million worth of business a year with assets of $2 million, it was on the decline and de Havilland was not interest in keeping it going.

Clarke, a lawyer by profession, borrowed $150,000 on his own and setup a holding company with four friends. They then bought the division from de Havilland, inviting a dozen of the senior Spar management to come with them.

"I bought the option for Spar personally," Clarke recalled in an interview.

When Spar was born as a separate company under Clarke, it had more than 420 employees. It was doing $1.5 million in repair and overhaul of aircraft, $1 million in space work and $2.5 million in miscellaneous products.

That worked out to about $13,000 in sales per employee. Much of the equipment was obsolescent.

Clarke's first move was to chop the staff to 270 within six months.

"Our first major conclusion was that we had to have a large stable base of business to increase our cash flow — and we decided that would have to be in the repair and overhaul business."

Today, more than 500 items arrive at the plant each year for repair and overhaul.

In 1969, Spar made another major move by purchasing York Gears Ltd. of Toronto to which was doing $2 million a year in repair and overhaul and some manufacturing, but which was "virtually bankrupt."

Spar's earnings have been steady, about $300,000 or nine cents a share for its 2,500 share-holders.

With 50 to 70 per cent of its business coming from Canadian government contracts, the company is looking to broaden its current scope of business, and not be as active in diversifying as in the past.

"Staying within the current situation," Clarke said, "We see our sales probably doubling in the next 10 years, which would be a slower rate than in the last 10 years."

Mining Firm Blacklist Alleged

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Striking mine workers in Granisle, 150 miles northwest of here, are planning a $1 million damage suit against the Bell Copper Division of Noranda Mines Ltd. for putting its 175 workers on a "province-wide blacklist," says John Hadfield, vice-president of the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers, Local 10.

He said Wednesday the union has 12 affidavits from workers who say they have seen the blacklist.

He said the blacklist contains the names of all hourly paid workers at the mine, the social security number, birth date and seniority standing.

Hadfield said the list is dated Feb. 5 and was sent by Bell Copper to every industrial personnel office in the province.

Hadfield said blacklisting is against the law in B.C. and the company's action is hurting not only striking workers but those who quit before Feb. 7.

He said striking workers applying for jobs have been told by personnel officers throughout B.C. that their names are on a blacklist and therefore they could not be hired.

Hadfield said he was told by a personnel officer that he was blacklisted and has been turned away from available jobs three times.

He said the 12 affidavits have been sent to Local 10 lawyer Harry Rankin of Vancouver who is preparing a $1 million lawsuit against Bell Copper and Noranda.

STEINHAUSER
. . . made prediction

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Mary Steinhauser told a friend that if there ever was a hostage-taking incident at the British Columbia Penitentiary "the guards would get me," her sister said at the inquest into her death Tuesday.

Mrs. Margaret Heronitis, said her sister gave that prediction to a friend, Miss Petra Graves, before the June, 1975, hostagle-taking incident.

Miss Steinhauser was killed when an armed squad of guards stormed into the area where she and 14 others were held by three inmates.

Coroner Doug Jack immediately termed Mrs. Heronitis's statement "very disastrous" and said Miss Graves would have to be called to give evidence at the inquest.

The sister of the deceased made her statements following a 6½-hour session of testimony from Fred Leech, the prison security director, who was in charge of pen security at the time of the incident.

Logger Fined $10,000 For Polluting Loon Lake

CLINTON, B.C. (CP) — Delmar Thomas Robberstad of C and D logging was fined $10,000 Tuesday for three convictions of polluting Loon Creek between Cache Creek and Clinton last December.

Conservation officers told Judge Terry Shupe of provincial court that one skidder has been resting in the creek, hooked to several fresh logs apparently hauled down the creek. There were tree tops in the creek to make a road access and about 1,300 feet of the creek's sides was damaged.

The clean-up operation required 10 men from the fish and wildlife branch, using winches, axes and chain saws for 10 hours one day. Student workers and some fish and wildlife men later planted 300 poplar trees for shade and to retain bank soil.

Judge Shupe fined Robberstad $3,000 on one count, ordered him to pay $2,000 restitution by June 30, fined him $2,000 on a second count and $3,000 on a third count.

John Cartwright, regional fisheries biologist of Kamloops, in his testimony showed the court a series of pictures taken in December and after the cleanup in May. One picture showed a number of spawners in a pool of creek water.

Cartwright said the fisheries department has had research going on at this creek since 1949.

TRAINS ROLLING, MEN GROUSING

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Rail freight trains were rolling again Wednesday after nearly a month's shutdown, but the crews on the trains and in the yards were far from happy with the binding arbitration forced upon them by the provincial government.

"It's a sick situation," said yardman Eric Williams.

"Ten long months we bargain and battle for a decent contract and then we're shot into binding arbitration . . ."

Williams was one of about 220 out of 450 trainmen, members of the United Transportation Union (UTU), who have reluctantly obeyed provincial legislation ending their long dispute with the provincially-owned railway.

"We're very unhappy," he said. "It's enough to make a man sit down and wonder if it's all worthwhile.

"No wonder a lot of us have already quit and a lot of senior men are thinking of quitting, too.

"Most members of the public don't seem to understand that we're fighting an issue. We're not out to mess anybody up. We just want pay and overtime arrangements that make working here worth the trouble."

Meanwhile, freights have been moving out of here, Squamish and other key points since Tuesday. Only yards at Quesnel, Fort St. James and Fort Nelson were reporting congestion trouble late Wednesday.

Fourth University Proposed

NELSON (CP) — Many of the 30 briefs presented Wednesday to the Winegard Commission on post-secondary education in the Interior suggested that a fourth public university be established in the province.

Notre Dame University (NDU), located here, was favored by many briefs, with Kamloops, Prince George and Kelowna also mentioned.

Dr. William Winegard and his panel of three advisers were also asked what had happened to the 1973 McTaggart-Cowan report on the same subject.

The theme of most of the briefs was for no more talk, but immediate action.

Rev. Bob Morris, minister of Fairview United Church here, said that "small is beautiful" in reference to the size of NDU, which has averaged an enrolment of 700 students during the last 10 years.

He quoted statistics from a Universities Council of B.C. study indicating that programs in the arts and education faculties cost about $200 a student more at the University of British Columbia in Vancouver than at NDU.

"We have been told that NDU is already dead," he said. "I hope Mr. Winegard will take the message of his community back to the minister that resurrection is still a possibility."

Mayors' Group Changes Name

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities Wednesday changed its name to the Federation of Canadian Municipalities.

Delegates at the annual 39th meeting approved the change which Paul Godfrey of Toronto, outgoing president, described as a non-issue at the four-day meetings which started Wednesday.

He said the majority of the members felt the change was needed because mayors are not the only leaders of local governments, which comprise the Canada-wide body.

The group probably will be more commonly known as Municipal Canada.

Ferry Subsidy Backing Sought

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Federation of Canadian Municipalities will be asked Friday to support a proposal that the federal government help subsidize British Columbia ferry services.

George McKnight, a Port Alberni alderman, introduced the resolution Wednesday during a workshop on the problems of small cities and rural municipalities.

The resolution, approved at the workshop, will be presented at the federation's plenary session Friday.

Speaking during a resolution on rural transporation policy, McKnight told delegates that on June 1, the provincial government increased ferry rates between the mainland and Vancouver Island.

He said that the federal government has refused to subsidize the provincial ferry system because it is not interprovincial, and because the federal government claims it is not part of the Trans-Canada Highway.

"It is part of the Trans-Canada Highway," said McKnight.

He said a federal park, Pacific Rim National Park at Long Beach, is being developed on the island with federal funds and will attract tourists "who must use the B.C. ferry system to get to the park."

McKnight said he was pointing out the problem to make delegates aware that the Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities would present a resolution on the question at next year's FCM convention.

He later presented a resolution asking for federation support for the association's quest for federal subsidies for B.C. ferry services.

Accused Criminologist's Mind Diseased, Say MDs

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two psychiatrists told the British Columbia Supreme Court Wednesday that criminologist Dr. Charles Eichman of Tallahassee, Fla., was suffering from a disease of the mind when he attacked his wife with an iron pipe here March 31, 1975.

Eichman, 38, is charged with the attempted murder of Cora Eichman, 49, of Vancouver, who was found severely beaten in the parkade of her city apartment. She now lives under total nursing care in Regina because of brain damage suffered in the incident.

Eichman, described by psychiatrists as a highly-intelligent person, told Mr. Justice W. A. Craig and the jury that he entered into a mental debate with himself over the rationality of the idea to kill his wife. He said he finally decided to do it to avoid being destroyed by his wife, then immediately entered into a state of extreme calm and serenity which lasted until he struck the first blow.

Dr. Merton Ekwall, a Tallahassee psychiatrist, and Dr. R. L. Whitman, a Vancouver psychiatrist, told the court that as a result of interviews with Eichman and studies of the evidence they believed the criminologist was suffering from paranoid delusions at the time of the attack.

They said that the accused in that state would be convinced that what he was doing was morally right though legally wrong, but that he was convinced he had to do it.

Dr. Whitman told the court he believed Eichman at the time was suffering from a disease of the mind and "he believed his wife was harassing him and she was deliberately trying to destroy him and his goals in life."

Defence counsel Terry Robertson said in his address to the jury there was no question that Eichman struck the blows to his wife, but submitted that the man was suffering from a disease of the mind to the point where he was not responsible for his acts.

He said that the criminologist was under mental pressure which had built up over the previous months and that after his wife's phone call from Vancouver on March 25 to Tallahassee, he went into a paranoid reaction.

Crown counsel John Rowan told the jury that Eichman may have been in a tormented state at the time of the plan and of tthe attack, but Eichman "knew what he was doing and should be held legally responsible for what he did."

Eichman gave himself up to police in Atlanta, Ga., after leaving here. He testified earlier in confessing to the attack on his wife.

He testified of mental torture brought about by marital problems when he was seeking to complete his doctorate in criminology.

Gen. Quang Receives Job Offer in L.A. Area

OTTAWA (CP) — Dang Van Quang, the former South Vietnam general ordered deported almost one year ago, as been offered a job in the Los Angeles area, an immigration department spokesman said Wednesday.

The job would require "expertise and initimate knowledge of Southeast Asia," the spokesman said. No other details were available.

The former aide to President Thieu has been in Montreal since May, 1975, shortly after the collapse of the Thieu regime. He was ordered deported last July after Immigration Minister Robert Andras termed him an undesirable person because of accusations of corruption and drug trafficking.

Quang made a labor certification application to the U.S. authorities based on the job offer, a necessary step if he is to be accepted as an immigrant to the United States, the spokesman said. It was not known who made the job offer.

If no American can fill the job and the labor certification is approved, it still may be several months until his application is approved.

Lillie Levine, chief of consular services of the U.S. consulate in Montreal, said Quang would have to present police certificates from every place he has lived for more than six months since the age of 16, prior to admission to the United States. The certificates provide records of any criminal convictions.

Quang first applied for a U.S. visa in the summer of 1975. He has already been denied admission as a refugee or special immigrant.

Andras has put off the deportation of the former general, saying he wanted to give Quang a chance to find a third country which may accept him.

Otherwise, the government would have no choice but to deport him to his country of origina, Vietnam, where he waits an uncertain fate.

ACCUSED BRINKS ROBBER RELEASED

MONTREAL (CP) Rejean Duff, arrested in connection with the $2.8-million robbery of a Brink's armored truck last March, was freed Wednesday of four charges stemming from the robbery because of insufficient evidence.

Duff, 20, was scheduled to appear again in court today on a charge of stealing licence plates allegedly carried on the panel truck the bandits used during the holdup.

Sessions Court Judge Claude Joncas, presiding over Duff's preliminary hearing, dismissed the charges of robbery, forcible confinement, conspiracy to commit robbery and theft of a panel truck.

"There was insufficient proof to continue the trial," the judge said in an interview later.

Roger Provencal, 42, and Michel Pilon, 36, arrested with Duff pleaded not guilty June 3 to similar charges. They are free on bail of $25,000 each until their preliminary hearing in September.

Duff testified he was beaten by three or four police officers during a 30-hour stay in the interrogation room and lost consciousness at least twice while being questioned. Police said the interrogation lasted 2½ hours.

Tory Clark Feels Pulse Of Victoria

National Conservative leader Joe Clark came to town Wednesday to shake hands with Victorians and to feel their pulses as well.

He told a noon-hour rally at Centennial Square he was crossing Canada to find out what the local problems are and to listen to possible solutions.

Then he demonstrated his low-keyed approach by wading into the crowd and discussing politics face-to-face for 25 minutes.

Many had personal problems, but some wanted to discuss the big issues.

Clark told one young man that the vote on capital punishment would be very close.

However, he did not have any precise information because he was deliberately not asking other Conservative MPs how they planned to vote.

Any canvass of the MPs by the leader could be construed as an attempt to influence votes and he wanted it to be a completely free vote.

Clark repeated an earlier statement that the would vote against capital punishment, but if it became law he would not hesitate to enforce the law, if he were prime minister.

With other Victorians he debated a wide spectrum of issues, from pensions to aid to small businessmen.

Most people, it turned out, just wanted to shake his hand and talk about social questions, like where they were born and what people they knew in common.

Clark thanked them for their comments and was generally well received.

In a 20-minute speech, Clark gave what amounted to a fireside chat about his trip to visit President Ford on Tuesday and his desire to meet as many Canadians as possible before election day, expected in 1978.

There was no cheering but there were five rounds of applause.

The single heckler was on Clark's side.

When Clark was heaping praise on Victoria MP Allan McKinnon and Saanich MP Don Munro for their work in the House of Commons, a man shouted "they're both wonderful men!" The shout drew one of the louder ovations of the day.

He noted that the most recent Gallup poll showed the Conservatives would get 43 per cent of the vote if an election were held now, 12 percentage points ahead of the Liberals. He added that he was also aware that this gap would probably close near election time.

"One of the problems of the Progressive Conservative Party is that we have been out of office so long that some people think we belong there," he said.

To counter this attitude, he would emphasize a team approach to politics, would offer the Conservatives as an alternative government and he would try to discuss politics with as many Canadians as possible during the next two years.

Instead of doing this in groups, he would do it on an individual basis, he said.

Then he demonstrated his approach to politics by moving into the crowd and answering questions there.

Inevitably he was compared to Trudeau by members of the crowd.

"He has more hair than Pierre," one woman said.

Clark is not a kisser but will shake hands with everybody. The first person he greeted when he entered the square was Colonist reporter Eleanor Boyle, who was startled but pleased to have Clark walk over to her. The last hand he shook was that of one of the half dozen Victoria police constables who were watching Clark proceed through the crowd.

They were hardly needed. Everything was quiet and gentle. It is not clear how Clark's style will go over in the big, roaring cities but it seemed to fit Victoria perfectly, very polite and nobody made too much noise.

I Want Law Degree—McTeer

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Maureen McTeer, exercising a woman's prerogative, has changed her mind and will go back to law school this fall.

"I really want that degree and I now believe that the sooner I get it, the better."

She made the comment in an interview in Victoria Wednesday, accompanying her husband, national Conservative leader Joe Clark.

Her return to law school will be complicated by the birth of their first child a few weeks before classes begin.

"I have interviewed a number of women and I have decided upon a registered nurse who will come in when I am at classes," she said.

McTeer failed her law examinations this spring, having missed more than one month of classes while campaigning with her husband for the Conservative leadership.

"It wasn't the classes I missed that caused me to fail, however," she said.

"The exams were in the morning and they were held after I became pregnant. I wasn't feeling well at all."

She said she is confident that she will pass the examinations next spring after repeating her final year at the University of Ottawa, starting in the fall.

"Everybody is asking me if I want a boy or a girl but all I care is that it is a healthy baby. If it's a boy, Joe will name him. If it's a girl, I'll probably name her.

"I've done some thinking about girls' names but I have not made a choice yet.

"It's not really important, you know. It doesn't matter what the baby is called as long as it's a healthy baby. That's all that matters."

McTeer has made a policy of being at her husband's side throughout his political career but in recent days the strain has been beginning to tell.

"I've only had about two hours sleep in the past 24 hours. I must confess I am a bit weary. I'm afraid I'm not at my best."

She was, however, bright and gay while shaking hands with many Victorians in the crowd in Centennial Square Wednesday.

McTEER

The women were asking how she was feeling and wanted to know when the baby would be born. (Late October.)

The men said they just wanted to meet her out of curiosity.

Now 24, she married Clark on June 30, 1973, when she was 21 and he was 34. She was brought up in Cumberland, Ont., a bilingual community in the Ottawa Valley, and has helped her Alberta-born husband to learn French.

Her speeches to small meetings in Quebec in French are credited by political observers for her husband's strong showing in that province during the Conservative leadership convention in February.

Clark is believed to have run third among Quebec delegates on the first ballot (behind Claude Wagner and Brian Mulroney) and this gave him the early strength he needed to mount a serious challenge in later ballots.

He is slightly more than average height while she is almost as tall, has broad shoulders, dark hair and blue eyes.

Housing Hearing A Biggie

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

For about four hours Wednesday night 120 residents of the Rockland and Fairfield areas pleaded with Victoria city council not to allow townhouse development in their neighborhoods.

It was one of the biggest public hearings at City Hall since the fierce battles waged against developers by the James Bay Community Association several years ago, and many of the arguments had a familiar ring to them.

Concerns about overly high density, traffic probelms and possible harm to the neighborhood quality of life were mentioned as objector followed objector, most of them greeted by warm rounds of applause.

But they left the meeting unaware of the outcome, because with two aldermen absent council tabled the bylaws for a week until all members can be present for the vote.

The Rockland hearing concerned an application for a land-use contract by Tod-Hackett Construction Ltd., to allow the firm to build nine townhouses on Pemberton Road.

The three-quarter-acre site is immediately north of the Rockland Square townhouse project now nearing completion by another developer, and this was repeatedly cited as an example of the type of development which detracts from Rockland's heavily-treed beauty.

Architec for both schemes is John Di Castri. He was criticized by some speakers who claimed assurances given on the earlier development, that the maximum number of trees would be retained, had not been honored.

Di Castri said several trees had to be removed to meet the site access requirements of the fire marshal.

John Graeme, of 990 Terrace, president of the Rockland Area Association, urged council not to approve the Tod-Hackett application until the effects and impact of the Rockland Square project can be property assessed.

He said several association members who had supported the earlier development proposal now regret that they did so because it has not turned out as they had been led to believe.

In his articulate address, Graeme tried to dispel the popular image of Rockland as an exclusive enclave for the wealthy. He said, amid laughter, that besides quality residences it has a mixture of nursing homes, apartments in converted homes "and even the odd condominium and bearded resident."

One of the beards in question belonged to young Guy Hawkins, 1002 Carberry Gardens, who complained that the format of public hearings automatically places affected residents on the "defensive."

Hawkins, a car salesman, said he pays $85 a month rent for his apartment suite in a building with nine other tenants where the stairs creak, the plumbing makes weird noises and everyone likes it that way.

He could afford to live in more modern surroundings, he said, but he prefers the special qualities of Rockland. "All the people who live there like it the way it is."

Commented Ald. Bob Wright, wryly: "If you people are on the defensive I would sure hate to be around when you're on the attack."

Roger Walker, 830 Pemberton, was one of several speakers who voiced concern about the "domino" or "leapfrogging" theory, where the intrusion of multiple-family development into a single-family area is used to justify further, similar development.

"Every new development is the next 'fringe,' and so on and so on," he added. "How far will this leapfrogging effect go?"

Ald. Ron McKenzie said the established residents of all areas urge municipalities to leave their neighborhoods alone, but the people who would live in the new developments have no say at all. Where were the younger couples and those without accommodation going to live?

Walker replied that the Tod-Hackett townhouses would probably sell for about $70,000 each and "I don't think they are places for people starting out in life."

There were fewer objectors to the rezoning application by Tech Designed Homes Ltd., which proposes to build six two-storey townhouses on a site of nearly 10,000 square feet on Chamberlain Street.

Ted Bowers, consultant to the applicant, said the complex would act as a "buffer" between the single-family homes on the street and the Chamberlain Walk commercial-residential building.

But Larry McDermott, 1009 Chamberlain, said the commercial building is already an "insult" and the townhouses would merely "add injury to insult."

One resident said parking on the street is already a serious problem, and the proposed development would merely compound it. Another said its semi-stuccoed exterior would not be in keeping with the quality of adjoining homes.

Accident Victim Critical

Two Colwood men were sent to hospital, one in criticial condition, after a motorcycle they were riding crashed into a pole on the Old Island Highway near Shoreline Road Wednesday night.

A spokesman for Victoria General Hospital said this morning Stan Furber, 29, of 180 Atkins, was in critical condition while Steven Brotherston, 25, of 1253 Goldstream, was in fair condition.

Colwood RCMP said Furber, the driver of the bike, apparently lost control of the vehicle on a gravel shoulder and spun into the pole. The accident occurred at 11:02 p.m.

Q. Do you know if chelation therapy for arteries is administered anywhere in B.C. or elsewhere in Canada? In the U.S. it is very expensive. — E.S.

A. Material which you forwarded describes this therapy as use of chemical to extract calcium from the substances which cause hardening of the arteries, thus breaking down the blockages. Local medical sources say the treatment is not available in this country as far as they know and add that they believe it to be based on a false premise, that removal of calcium will solve the problem. They note arteries can be blocked by substances which contain no calcium.

Variety and People In Gussie's Career

Mrs. "Gussie" Newton-White, administrator of Saanich's mental health centre at 4514 West Saanich Road, retires June 28 after a varied professional career which began "on the edge of civilization" in Saskatchewan.

"I taught in a log school and lived in a log house. My pay was $30 a month," she recalls, "Although, actually, all I got was $200 a year."

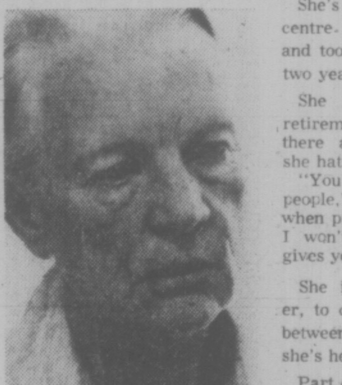
At the time, she said, she lodged with a family of three, "living mainly on turnips and blueberries".

She doesn't regret those days because they allowed her "to appreciate the benefits we have now."

She did a stint with the Royal Canadian Air Force's women's division during the Second World War, teaching aircraft recognition to air gunners.

After the war she studied at UBC and became a social worker.

In 1949 she started work at the provincial department of health's child guidance clinic in Vancouver, transferring to its Victoria counterpart in January, 1952.



NEWTON-WHITE

She's been with the Saanich centre since January, 1970, and took charge of the centre two years ago.

She frankly admits, with retirement close at hand, there are times she wishes she hated her job.

"You get quite attached to people," she explains, "Now when people come in I realise I won't see them again. It gives you a sad feeling."

She isn't prepared, however, to completely cut the ties between her and the people she's helped overthe years.

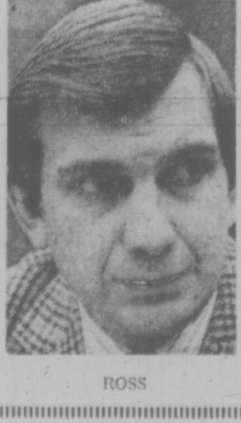
Power Cut

A malfunction in a transformer on the Mainland which feeds power to Vancouver Island caused power failures in an area spreading from Victoria to Campbell River today.

Some users were without power for as long as two hours while others had power again within as little as 12 minutes.

A B.C. Hydro spokesman said the power failure was a recurrence of the same problems that caused last Friday's power failures.



ROSS

ROSS TAKES OVER AT BRENTWOOD

The chairman of the Greater Victoria School Board, William Ross, will take over as headmaster of Brentwood College, replacing David MacKenzie who retires Friday after 15 years.

A former lieutenant in the Canadian Navy, MacKenzie is largely credited with refounding the exclusive private school in 1961, 14 years after the original school buildings had been destroyed in a fire.

Over the years the school has grown from 90 students and seven teachers to 325 students and a full-time staff of 24. Sixty students will graduate Friday.

MacKenzie is expected to return to the school as a teacher after a one-year sabbatical.

Sooke Vote Anticipated To Be Close

Eric Butler, chairman of a chamber of commerce committee promoting municipal incorporation for Sooke, said today he anticipates a close decision when residents vote on it next Tuesday.

The main advantage Butler sees in having Sooke classified as a municipality rather than an electoral area is the shift to local control, having a council of local people deal with local problems.

But for most of the 200 people who turned out for an information meeting at Sooke community hall Wednesday night, the critical question appeared to be: would it increase taxes?

They peppered Tom Moore of the provincial municipal affairs department with questions, most of them related to taxes and sewage disposal.

"If you have more services, it will cost more," he told them.

John Tregear, a consulting engineer also on the chamber committee, assured residents that services such as sewers, lights and roads would not be pushed on them but would first go to a vote.

An estimated 2,500 people are eligible to vote. They must be 19 years old, residents in Sooke for at least six months and in Canada for a year, Canadian citizens or British subjects.

There will be an advance poll Monday afternooon in the community hall dining room, in the centre of the village.

Voting Tuesday, from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., will be at the community hall at the Catholic church opposite Edward Milne high school and at The Pantry in the Juan de Fuca auto court near Kemp Lake Road.

Thief's Choice Right in Focus

Whoever broke into Studio 35 photography shop at 1246 Esquimalt Road Monday night and stole $5,200 worth of equipment knew what he was doing and what he was after, Esquimalt police said today.

Sgt. Doug Spoxton said the thief took only the very best — complete Hasselblad outfit generally considered the Rolls Royce of the cameras.

Missing were a Hasselblad camera body, lenses, magazines, meters, extension tube, filters, screens, a tripod coupler, tote bag and even a neck strap.

Sproxton said there was no sign of forced entry.

Two doctors' offices were entered at 777 Blanshard about 11 p.m., but offenders frightened off empty-handed by a resident of the building.

About 15 minutes later an audible alarm frightened away thieves at the Medical Arts Building, 1105 Pandora, where another doctor's office had been entered.

Tony Eng was elected president of the Victoria Chinatown Lions Club on installation night held recently at the Golden City Restaurant.

First vice-president is Sam Lee and second Vice-president Daniel Chan. Other officers are Bill Lowe, secretary; Ken Chee, treasurer; Henry Joe and James Chow, one-year directors; Peter Wong and Victor Bradstock, two-year directors; David Yuen, tail twister and Philip Chan, immediate past-president.

TARGET: FERRY RATES

EMERY

A concerted campaign against the ferry rate increases will be waged by the incoming executive of Victoria Chamber of Commerce, president-elect Alan Emery said today.

Emery, who will succeed Jack Hutchins on July 1, said studies will be launched to support the chamber's case that the ferry system is an extension of the highways and should not be expected to make money.

"The ferries should not be free but the fares should be much lower than they are," he said.

A family with two adults and two small children driving to Vancouver must pay $22 each way.

"A family cannot afford to go to Vancouver very often if they must pay $44 for the return trip," Emery said.

The incoming executive will also restructure the committee system and will divide the government affairs committee into three committees — one each for municipal, provincial and federal problems.

Emery was born in Edmonton and has been active in the chamber since coming here six years ago. He is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Branson, Emery and Carfra.

Also on the new executive will be John Ansell, executive vice-president, and vice-presidents Bob Harvey, Egon Baumann and Bruce Walker.

On the executive committee are Wilf Fraser, Mel Cooper and Robert Wheaton.

No Sweetness In Upset Win

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

When a team that has won only three of 11 previous games knocks off one with a 10-2 record, you'd think everything would be milk-and-honey sweet.

But it wasn't that way in Coquitlam Adanacs' dressing room after they scored Wednesday's rousing 12-11 victory over the Western Lacrosse Association leaders, the Victoria Shamrocks.

Coquitlam coach Bobby Marsh and tempestuous Dan Piotrowski, one of the players, engaged in a lengthy and heaters shouting match that could be clearly heard in the corridor outside their Memorial Arena dressing room.

Marsh, generally an obliging fellow, then came out, apologized for "not being in the mood" to talk and requested the media interview assistant Dave Durante.

No one with the Coquitlam team would say what the dispute was about but it came close to being as interesting and exciting as the action on the floor.

Durante, one of the major architects of the upset victory, credited Coquitlam's floor success to the fact "we played some defence for a change. We hopped on the loose balls, especially in the first and third periods, and that won it for us."

Victoria coach Nirmal Dillon agreed with Durante.

"Our game," said Victoria's freshman coach, "is controlling the ball. We weren't going after the loose balls and we made too many stupid mistakes.

"Durante was the guy who helped do it to us. He was all over the floor."

Dave scored three goals and set up three. His brother, Ray, contributed two goals and three assists and Coquitlam's other brother act—the Parsons—also played a prominent role in defeating Victoria for the second time this year.

Kevin Parsons, playing his first game after missing most of the season, scored three goals and set up a pair while younger brother Rhys enjoyed a three-goal, four-assist evening.

Adanacs, who have had thier share of player problems this season, turned up without two regulars when Harry Powless and Randy Bryan both missed the team's chartered plane.

Jim Rickbeil missed the game because of an injury (but is expected back tonight). In addition to a rash of injuries this season, the Adanacs lost Mike Mushins when he decided to retire and George Musseau when the latter accepted a business transfer to Vernon.

Adanacs used only two floor units compared to the three utilized by Dillon, but Coquitlam's ball-hawking seemed to make the difference as the cellar-dwellers out-shot Shamrocks 56-50.

Ivan Thompson and Jerry Kustaski each scored a pair of goals while Norm Baker, Larry Bell, Jeevan Dillon, Mike Walsh, Chris Hall and Ron MacNeil scored singles.

Finley's Fire Sale Doused

By The Associated Press

Marvin Miller once asked of the baseball owners' individual and sometimes conflicting ways: "Who's going to protect the owners from themselves?"

It may be commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Kuhn, wondering if there might be something rotten in his kingdom, called for a hearing in New York today to discuss Charles Finley's sale of three of his top players from Oakland A's, a sale that brought shrill cries of agony from fans and other club owners alike.

But Kuhn did more than just call together the principles involved. He halted the sale of pitcher Vida Blue to New York Yankees for a reported $1.5 million and the sale of pitcher Rollie Fingers and outfielder Joe Rudi to Boston Red Sox for $1 million apiece, and kept them on the Oakland roster.

Like it or not, Finley still owns the trio—at the moment. And, by order of the commissioner, he can't use them.

"The Blue-Fingers-Rudi assignments by the Oakland club raise questions that I feel require a hearing," Kuhn said in a teletyped notice to all 24 major league clubs.

"Accordingly, I will hold a hearing . . . at 2:30 p.m. in this office. The Oakland, New York and Boston clubs and Marvin Miller have been asked to attend."

Miller is executive-director of the players union.

And the last segment of Kuhn's teletype said: "Pending final determination of what action, if any, I should take, the three players involved will remain on the active list of the Oakland club but may not appear in uniform or participate in Oakland games."

Miller spent part of Wednesday debating issues with John Gaherin, bargaining agent for the owners. A major topic of discussion was Finley's fire sale.

The owners and Gaherin have taken the position voiced by Minnesota Twins boss Calvin Griffith, who said:

"I think it's a terrible thing when two clubs go out and start bidding to see who can buy a championship team."

Miller said he doesn't understand what the owners are talking about.

"I'm puzzled. What's so bad for baseball. I don't know what it means that they're concerned about balanced competition.

"The Yankees haven't won a pennant in 12 years and the Red Sox have never won the World Series."

HOWE PONDERING FUTURE OPTIONS

EDMONTON (CP) — Gordie Howe, veteran professional hockey superstar, says he's thinking about playing another season but he's also looking at a suggestion he become president of the World Hockey Association.

Howe, 48, playing president of Houston Aeros, said in an interview the odds of him playing again in the upcoming season are about 50-50.

"When you really enjoy something, it's hard to get out of it," said Howe.

"It would be the last year of my four-year contract. But to be honest, I just don't know."

As well as considering the presidency of the WHA for himself, Howe said his wife, Colleen, is being asked about doing some work with WHA Properties.

"She's a creative marketing individual

Howe said taking the WHA's top job would depend on a number of things, including the location of the league's office. He likes his present home city of Houston.

The question of the presidency would have to be put to a meeting of WHA trustees, he said. Howe said he and his wife will have to consider whether they would best serve the league by remaining with the Aeros or accepting administrative positions with the league.

In Toronto, a WHA head office spokesman said he has heard of a petition being circulated urging Howe to continue playing so that he could become the first major-league pro to score 1000 goals. Howe has a total of 965 goals in 28 seasons in the National Hockey League and the WHA.

Canadian Girls Lose to Poland

MONTREAL (CP) — Halinka Wyka-Iwaniec sank a field goal with 12 seconds to play to break a 78-78 tie and give Poland an 80-79 victory over Canada in international women's exhibition basketball play Wednesday.

Lafer, Canada's national men's team had little trouble defeating Spain 92-64. Canada led 42-34 at the half.

Poland, ranked sixth in Europe, was shaky in the first half and trailed 42-31 after the first 20 minutes. But they came on stronger in the second half and took advantage of several Canadian mistakes to outscore the host country 49-37 in the second twenty minutes.

Canada had a chance to tie the score with five seconds to play when Sylvia Sweeney went to the free-throw line for two shots. She missed on her first but sank her second.

Bev Bland, of Richmond, was Canada's top shooter with 26 points, 18 of them coming in the first half. She left the game with four personal fouls with 9:07 to play, came back with two and a half minutes to go, before finally fouling out with 46 seconds remaining.

In the men's game, Jamie Russell of Burlington, Ont., scored 21 points and Bill Robinson of Chemainus had 20 to lead the Canadian team to the one-sided win.

Canada, beaten by Spain earlier this year, played without the services of guard Martin Rilley of Winnipeg, who has a hyper extension on his right elbow.

Football's Owners See Case for Compensation

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Football League met Wednesday, but the talk mainly was about baseball's frenzied dealing Tuesday night — dealing which NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle said strengthens his position that the richest teams can buy any players they want.

"They (the NFL owners) are all talking about that," said Rozelle, referring to Oakland A's" outright sale of three star players for $3.5 million. "They obviously felt it supported their position that the haves will get better."

Owner Charles Finley of the A's sold outfielder - first baseman Joe Rudi and relief pitcher Rollie Fingers to Boston Red Sox for $1 million each and pitcher Vida Blue to New York Yankees for $1.5 million Tuesday night.

The Oakland sale "strengthens in theory our position," Rozelle told a news conference. "They (free agents) go to contenders, they go to money, they go to the glamor places or off-season employment opportunities. Those are the four main reasons a player wants to move."

The NFL currently is fighting a court ruling that strikes down a compensation clause which would allow a player to play out the option year of his contract and sign with a team of his choice. Until a judge ruled the compensation clause was illegal, a team signing a free agent had to compensate the player's former team.

Rozelle noted that in pro basketball Kareem Abdul-Jabbar moved to Los Angeles from Milwaukee; in hockey, Bobby Orr moved to Chicago from Boston; and in football, John Riggins signed with Washington Redskins — a perennial challenger for the league title — after finishing his option year with New York Jets.

"We need some type of option-compensation and the draft," Rozelle said.

The commissioner said he has been involved in negotiations between the league and the NFL Players' Association for the last six weeks in an effort to sign a collective bargaining agreement and settle the long-standing war between the sides.

"I feel the climate is better, and both sides seem to want a deal," he said, while cautioning the "possibility exists of our going into another season without a contract, but we don't want to."

Cosmos to Protest Boston's Victory

By The Canadian Press

It was a confusing North American Soccer League game Wednesday night between Ntw York Cosmos and Boston Minutemen.

The Minutemen escaped New York with a 3-2 win when they outscored the Cosmos 4-3 on penolty shots, but the decision may not be final.

After the game, general manager Clive Toye of the Cosmos issued a verbal protest which he said he would follow up with a written protest today to commissioner Phil Woosnam.

In other games, St. Louis Stars snapped a nine-game losing streak with a 3-1 win over Rochester Lancers and Chicago Sting blanked Dallas Tornado 1-0.

The game at New York was in doubt even before it began when several Boston players threatened to stay on the sidelines because they had not been guaranteed workmen's compensation insurance. But 15 minutes before the contest's scheduled start, Woosnam received a telegram from the Minutemen saying that the insurance contract had been filed.

With the score deadlocked 3-3 in the penalty shooting, Boston coach Hubert Vogelsinger asked permission of referee Mike Muertz to substitute Gene Geimer to take the next shot instead of Phil Davis. Gainer was permitted to take the shot and hit the goalpost.

The linesman, however, then told the referee that New York executive Gordon Bradley had said that no substitution could be made and the referee had Davis take the shot, which he converted.

West Germany Will Enter 311

FRANKFURT, West Germany (Reuter) — West Germany will send a team of 311 athletes to the Olympics, the national Olympic committee announced Tuesday night. The largest group is the 58 track-and-field athletes, followed by 47 rowing competitors.

West Germany, which won eight gold medals at the 1972 Munich Olympics, will be sending at least three reigning individual gold medalists, including Klaus Wolfermann in the men's javelin, Ulrike Meyfarth in the women's high jump and show-jumper Hans Guenter Winkler.

Second Million Might Be Easier Than Lou's First

DULUTH, Ga. (AP) — There's a myth the U.S. Open golf championship, the 76th edition of which gets underway today, is worth $1 million to the winner.

"In that case," said Lou Graham, tongue firmly planted in cheek, "I'm working on my second million. I've given up on the first.

Graham scored an upset victory in this tournament a year ago, but is the forgotten man in the the speculation and publicity before the start of the event on the 7015-yard, par-70 Atlanta Athletic Club course.

Attention has gone to Jack Nicklaus, always the favorite, talented Tom Weiskopf, Masters king Ray Floyd and the four men dominating the tour this year — Hubert Green, Hale Irwin, Johnny Miller and Ben Crenshaw.

Graham, 38, has been largely ignored. He's been called the "invisible champion, the man nobody knows.

The national title hasn't been the gold mine it's reputed to be for him.

There are a couple of new clothing contracts. There was a lucrative appearance in Japan. And there's an increase in his exhibition fees.

"I'm not doing a lot more than I used to," Graham said, "but I'm getting paid for it a little more."

He hasn't won since his Open playoff win over John Mahaffey. He's played well but not spectacularly, just as he's done most of his 13-year tour career. His earnings this season are a respectable $67,385 and he's been in the title hunt a couple of times in recent weeks.

SUDBURY (CP) — The father of Ron Duguay, a centre for the Sudbury Wolves hockey team, was fined $400 in provincial court Wednesday on a charge of common assault in connection with an incident during a hockey game March 28.

Fernand Duguay pleaded guilty to the charge which was laid after a man struck Tony Horvath, a player for the Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds, during the third period of an Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A game.

Mike Allen, assistant Crown attorney, said a fight broke out at centre ice between Horvath and the younger Duguay during a game the Wolves won, 11-2.

Both received five-minute penalties, but while Horvath was in the penalty box he was approached and punched by a spectator. The Sault Ste. Marie players cleared the bench to pursue the attacker. Duguay's lawyer asked for a conditional or absolute discharge for his client. But Judge Gilles Matte said a conviction would be in order to act as a deterent for other

Collegiate Bosses Hoping for Quiet

OTTAWA (CP) — After several battle-filled years, officials of the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union (CIAU) are hoping the 1976-77 school year will be quiet.

For the last several years, off-field disputes have brought the CIAU more publicity than its athletic events.

Executive director Bob Pugh said in an interview Wednesday that he is confident last week's CIAU annual meeting in Toronto has sorted out most of the problems.

The head office here co-ordinates events for 47 universities and 10,000 athletes in nine sports in which national championships are held. It also administers rules and regulations agreed to by its members.

Last year, it was the Pickett affair that brought the CIAU and its five constituent associations into a public row.

Dave Pickett, a quarterback at the University of Windsor, was ruled ineligible by the CIAU but eligible by the Ontario universities.

When Windsor ignored the CIAU's warning, it was suspended from competition beyond its own league. But a court ruling said the CIAU had no enforceable eligibility rules and that Windsor could enter the playoffs but without Pickett. They did and lost to Ottawa Gee-Gees.

However, the CIAU has fixed up its rules problems and the Ontario association has amended its eligibility requirements to match the five-year CIAU limit.

Another court ruling appears to have ended for the time being a basketball dispute.

The CIAU allows only three foreign-trained basketball players on a team, a rule that three U.S. students at Acadia University said discriminated against them because the university would not let them on its team.

Pugh said the CIAU will continue to use the rule but will watch Nova Scotia where the provincial government says it may amend its Human Rights Act to cover universities.

The CIAU also agreed to delay for at least a year a football rule change that would have banned butt-blocking and butt-tackling. Both involve the use of the head as the main point of contact with opposing players.

United States studies have shown the technique causes many injuries, some fatal, and the CIAU rules committee decided to ban it.

Flitting Coach Never Sees Benefits of His Programs

RUGBY

After one year and almost 70,000 miles, Don Burgess of Victoria is calling it quits.

Don has decided to step down from his Rugby position as Canada's first coaching organizer (that's the new name for it — originally he was called national technical director for coaching) and return to his physical education teaching job at Parkland High School in Sidney.

The O'Keef-sponsored post will be advertised again and Don hopes the Canadian Rugby Union is able to find a Canadian coach to replace him.

"The major thing that has come to me while I've been travelling across the country is that people have been very pleased to talk to a Canadian, someone who has learned all his rugby in Canada," says Don.

But, regardless of who takes over, Don believes the job will be easier then when he stepped into it a year ago.

"We've established a level program for evaluating and training coaches," he explains. "It's going to be easy to follow because it's well laid out and it's supported by the provincial and federal governments."

Don, who will stay on the job until the end of August, watched Canada's game against the Barbarians of Britain in Toronto last Sunday and says, despite the national team's 29-4 defeat, Vancouver Islanders Ken Wilke, Hans de Goede, Casey Walt and Stu Barber all played well.

Following the match, Wilke was made an honorary Barbarian and de Goede was invited to play for a World XV against Cardiff during centennial celebrations in Wales in September.

Travel has been a big part of Don's year as coaching organizer. He has been across the country "10 or 12 times" and has made a tour to Britain.

And so, although he admits he would have liked to have given another year to the national job, he is now looking forward to returning to teaching and to coaching on a local level.

"The problem with flitting from one place to another all the time is that you never get a chance to see if the players and other coaches have benefitted and have progressed," Don explains. "I've had plenty of complimentary letters from people who say they have benefitted, but you still never see it for yourstlf."

DON BURGESS
. . . leaving national post

Don says he will be working with rugby coach Paul Copeland at Parkland and he plans, after an absence of 10 years, to return as coach of Oak Bay Wanderers.

"I've played for them a few times since, of course, but it was in 1966 that I last coached the Wanderers," says Don. "They've had their problems in the last five years or so and now I'd like to take some of the material I've picked up in the last year and pass it on to my old club."

But Don, who will be 44 in July, says he has no thought of making a grand comeback as fullback for the first-division team.

"No, I think those days are over," he says with a big grin. "I'll just keep it to the odd "Fun" game with the over-40s."

Sailing Trials Conclude In Breeze of Discontent

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — The Canadian Olympic sailing trials ended Wednesday with the last winning skipper pitched headlong into the harbor by his victorious crew.

His crew, Andreas Josenhans and Sandy MacMillan, whooped with joy and tossed the young Nova Scotian into the harbor after the protest jury weighed the boat, found it within class limits and dismissed a protest lodged by Peter Hall of Montreal, who finished second in the class, only 1.3 penalty points behind the winners.

The race, which likely would have opened a gap in the tight standings, was finally abandoned after a general recall.

Dexter won only one of the eight races, but sailed consistently throughout the trials.

Wednesday also saw the cancellation of the final Finn race, but in that class, Sandy Riley, 25, an articling lawyer from Toronto had built up a commanding lead and needed to finish fifth or better to clinch the title.

The 12-day trials selected six boats and 12 sailors to carry the Canadian flag against the world.

Flying Dutchman—Hans Fogh, Evert Bastet, Toronto.

Tempest—Allan Leibel, Lorne Leibeel, Toronto.

Later, four alternates, who will act as replacements in the event that one or more of the winning sailors are unable to compete, were nominated by the Canadian Yachting Association. They were Hugh Kidd of Brantford, Ont., Dave Shaw of Edmonton, Peter Higgins of Toronto and John Burrows of Pointe Claire, Que.

Tony Griffin of Toronto is the team manager, Maurice Murphy of Ottawa is the assistant team manager, Stephen Tubber of Vancouver is the coach and Fred Hersst of Toronto the meteorologist.

New Franchises

CLEVELAND (AP) — The three-year-old World Team Tennis league will take in two expansion franchises for the 1977 season at $1 million each, WTT president Larry King has announced.

The league has under consideration Chicago, Atlanta and the Dallas-Fort Worth areas. The expansion will give the league a dozen teams next season.

Uncertainty in Spokane Delays WCHL Planning

BRANDON — Uncertainty about the proposed transfer of the Winnipeg Clubs to Spokane, Wash., has forced governors of the Western Canada Hockey League to delay drawing up the 1976-77 schedule for at least a week.

The 12 governors adjourned the annual meeting Wednesday afternoon and will meet again in Calgary, June 24, at which time it is believed a decision can be made on the Spokane situation.

Clubs-owner Gerry Brisson has stated the team will not operate next season in the Manitoba capital due to competition from Winnipeg Jets of the World Hockey Association. Brisson received league approval to move the team to Spokane earlier this week but still needs the approval of the Canadian and United States Amateur Hockey Associations.

Reports from Wednesday's meeting indicate the WCHL will operate in three divisions next season, if the move to Spokane is approved. The new team, to be known as Spokane Americans, would probably join the Central Division of the 12-team major junior league along with Calgary Centennials, Medicine Hat Tigers and Lethbridge Broncos.

Victoria Cougars, New Westminster Bruins, Kamloops Chiefs and Portland Winter Hawks, the former Edmonton Oil Kings, would form the Coast Division while Brandon Wheat Kings, Flin Flon Bombers, Regina Pats and Saskatoon Blades would compete in the Estern Division.

On Tuesday, a two-division setup, with five clubs in the Western Division and seven in the East was proposed but apparently has been shelved due to problems of scheduling.

Should the move to Spokane be denied, Brisson apparently has the options of moving to Moose Jaw, where the league operated a team for two seasons in the late 1960s, or to withdraw from the WCHL for one season.

Moose Jaw did not have a junior team last season as owners withdrew from the Tier Two Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League in 1975.

Meanwhile, problems of another sort faced the WCHL on Wednesday.

In Edmonton, legislative opposition leader Bob Clark says the transfer of the Oil King franchise to Portland will restrict the basic freedoms of Albertans.

In a letter to WCHL president Ed Chynoweth, Clark objected to making Edmonton a protected zone for the Portland team. The Winter Hawks will retain WCHL rights to minor hockey players in the Edmonton area.

Forcing hockey players from a section of Alberta to play their minor junior hockey outside their native province would amount to a restriction of their basic freedoms, Clark said.

He added he will pressure both federal and provincial government officials to allow young hockey players from the province the option of playing Tier One junior hockey in the city of their choice.

Chynoweth could not be reached for comment.

GOERTZ REMANDED

SASKATOON (CP) — The preliminary hearing of a Saskatoon hockey player charged with assault in connection with the Feb. 20 Western Canada Hockey League game here has been rescheduled to Sept. 8.

Peter Goertz of Saskatoon Blades appeared in magistrate's court Wednesday and the hearing was set over because Goertz's lawyer was unavailable. Goertz was charged with assault along with two Victoria Cougar players, Tim Williams and Greg Tebbutt. Tebbutt faces two assault charges and Williams one. The two Victoria players are scheduled for preliminary hearings Monday.

Charges were laid following a game in which three Blades players were injured. Defenceman Bryan Baron suffered an eye injury and both defenceman Glen Leggott and forward Bruce Hamilton had concussions.

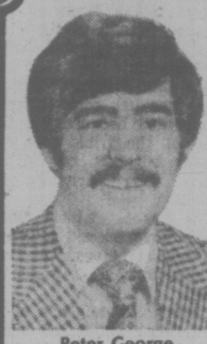
CP Trio Triumphs

Players from the host club finished first and third Wednesday in the annual 80-and-over lawn bowling tournament staged on the Canadian Pacific greens.

James Grundy-Hamilton, Tom McFetridge and Dave Donaldson won the event, which consisted of three eight-end games while the Victoria West rink of Jim Edwards, Walter Holdsworth and Murdie Anderson placed second and the trio of Arthur Plewman, Archie Goodall and Bert Arscott finished third.

The aggregate ages of the 30 players entered was 2,667 years and three players were aged 90 or older.

Father's Day . . . who started it all?



Peter George

Did you know that Father's Day originated at Spokane, Washington in 1919? A young girl, who had been raised by her widower father, along with 5 brothers and sisters convinced her local minister to declare a special day of recognition. Unfortunately it is still only a North American phenomenon.

Some wag described it as "the same as Mother's Day—only you don't spend so much". All of us will probably agree that "Dad is the Kin you love to touch"

We always thought the following poem says it all

PORTRAIT OF DAD

He isn't much to look at,
And his words come few and shy,
But to know him is to love him
Without ever knowing why.

Just to pass him on the sidewalk,
Catch his quick and friendly smile,
Makes you glad to call him neighbor,
Makes the morning worth your while.

True, he'll never win an Oscar,
Never taste undying fame;
He will earn no banner headlines,
Never set the world aflame.

But we children run to greet him
When his car turns in the drive,
And our chanted: "Here comes Daddy!"
Brings the twilight glad alive.

Brings our mother to the doorway,
Flushed, excited, sudden glad;
Swift forgetting cloud and shadow,
For the sunlight to be had.

To the world he's nothing special,
Never loud his praises ring;
But in this devoted circle,
He is master, lord, and king. —Maurice J. Ronayne

LAPERRIERE STAYING ON AS COACH

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Juniors of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League announced Wednesday that Jacques Laperriere will be back with the club as coach for a second season in 1976-77. Laperriere, a star defenceman with Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League before a knee injury cut short his career after the 1973-74 season, guided the Juniors to a 36-29-7 record last year in his coaching debut. The club was eliminated by Cornwall Royals in six games in a best-of-seven quarter-final playoff round.

Laperriere won the Calder Memorial Trophy as NHL rookie of the year in 1963-64 and was named to the first and second all-star teams twice each. He won the James Norris Memorial Trophy as best defenceman in the NHL in 1965-66.

Jim Dykes Dies at 80

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Jimmy Dykes, whose career in major-league baseball as a player and manager spanned 50 years, died Tuesday of an undisclosed illness. He was 80 years old.

Dykes played minor-league ball before the First World War and returned in 1918 to play 59 games with the old Philadelphia Athletics. Dykes' career ended in 1964 when he completed three years of coaching for the Milwaukee Braves and Kansas City A's.

As an on-and-off manager for 30 years, Dykes piloted six major league teams but never won a pennant. His last managerial position was in 1961 with Cleveland.

Paul Tough in Clutch

Paul Morrison, who has earned a reptutation for getting his team out of clutch situations, came up with another inspired effort Wednesday to spark Seaboard Construction to a 6-2 victory over Ingraham Hotel in one of two Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League games at Central Park.

Royal Oak Sporting Goods remained three points ahead of second-place Seaboard by blanking cellar-dwelling Matthews Heating 2-0 in the other game.

Morrison slammed a bases-loaded triple to highlight a four-run rally in the fourth inning.

Reg Underwood and Bob Burrows led Bate with two-run homers while Ken Bate cracked out a solo round-tripper for the Canadian and world title holders.

Stan Kern struck out all nine batters he faced while pitching the first three innings for Bate, Dave Ruthowski struck out three in two innings and Andy Konopacki finished up by striking out six in the last two frames.

Device Detects Danger Of Horse Breaking Leg

DURHAM, N. H. (AP) — A University of New Hampshire veterinarian and a Massachusetts Institute of Technology electrical engineer have teamed to make a device they say can predict whether a race horse may break a leg.

The device is the product of two years' work by Dr. James O'Connor of the UNH animal sciences department and MIT professor George W. Pratt.

The process, O-Connor says, works this way:

As a horse is guided across two special aluminum plates, it exerts pressure — from one ounce to 2,500 pounds — which registers on a monitoring screen, similar to a television picture tube.

O'Connor says horses which are developing a leg problem will favor the injured limb, which the monitor will pinpoint.

"But you can't look at the horse and tell anything is wrong," he says.

Fatigue causes a horse to break a leg, he says, because it loses the ability to rebound, or roll slightly backward on its hoof after the hoof hits the ground.

O'Connor and Pratt are trying to add more measuring equipment on their device so it can measure torque, the pressure exerted during twisting or turning motions.

A horse's front knee should be fully extended when its foot hits the ground. If not, O'Connor says, it could mean that the horse is tired and is more prone to a fracture.

Once it is discovered a horse's hoof isn't hitting the ground properly, he says, horseshoes can be fitted to change the angle of impact.

"It picked up a leg problem in a girl who broke a bone in her leg five years ago."

A similar device is being used in a Boston medical centre to find bone disorders, O'Connor adds. The process, he says, holds a potential for doing away with the need for surgery to diagnose certain bone disorders in people.

Deal Completed

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Blues have sent defenceman Rick Wilson to Detroit Red Wings to complete the deal in which the Blues acquired gaolie Doug Grant last season. The 25-year-old defenceman had been with the National Hockey League club since 1974.

Houle Returns

MONTREAL (CP) — Rejean Houle, who jumped to Quebec Nordiques of the World Hockey Association three years ago from Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League, has returned to the Canadiens and signed a three-year contract.

Houle, 26, was Montreal's first-round sleection in the NHL's amateur draft in 1969.

During his NHL career, Houle had 34 goals and 62 assists in 224 games with Montreal. He jumped to the Nordiques following the 1972-73 season.

During the 1975-76 season, the right winger had 51 goals and 52 assists with the Nordiques and in three WHA seasns, scored 128 goals and added 139 assists.

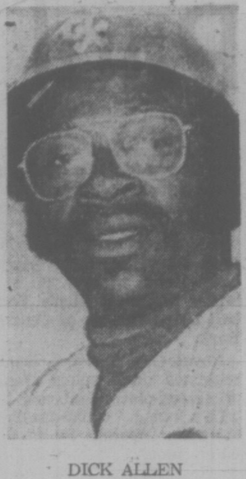
Allen Continues to Rate As Plus in Philadelphia



DICK ALLEN
. . . a helpful guy

By The Associated Press

Dick Allen, who has helped some of Philadelphia's young sluggers with his advice, is now helping the Phillies with his bat.

The 34-year-old first baseman, one of baseball's most feared sluggers in his prime, continued to prove Wednesday night that rumors of his demise—he hit only .233 last year—were greatly exaggerated.

He drove in four runs with a single and a two-run homer, his fifth of the season, as the runaway Phils trounced San Francisco Giants 10-2 in a National League baseball game.

Elsewhere in the National League, Pittsburgh Pirates remained seven games behind Philadelphia in the East Division with a 6-3 triumph over Houston Astros, Chicago Cubs stopped Cincinnati Reds 5-3 in a 6½-inning rain-shortened game, Los Angeles Dodgers downed New York Mets 4-1, San Diego Padres trimmed Montreal Expos 6-2 and St. Louis Cardinals edged Atlanta Braves 4-3.

In the American League, Bert Blyleven continued to be as erratic as his curve ball, losing a 9-4 decision to Cleveland Indians.

The loss lowered his record to 4-8 and was his third consecutive loss since his acquisition from Minnesota on June 1.

In the other American League games, Oakland A's whipped Boston Red Sox 4-1, Milwaukee Brewers blanked California Angels 9-0, New York Yankees stopped Minnesota Twins 9-4, Baltimore Orioles routed Chicago White Sox 10-2 and Detroit Tigers nipped Kansas City Royals 4-3.

With Allen supplying the batting power, Jim Kaat scattered four hits in breezing to his 241st career victory, most of any active major league hurler.

"Guys like the Bull (Greg Luzinski) and (Mike) Schmidt, they listen to him (Allen)," said Phillies second baseman Dave Cash. "Me, I'm a singles hitter. But they relate to Allen. He's helped them immensely. He tells them what to expect from a pitcher in different parts of the game. He's made them better hitters."

Allen, who is flirting with at the .300 mark, almost refuses to talk about himself these days. He refers to everything as "we" and "us."

"This team," he said, "has the most talent of any I've ever been a part of. I played with the 1964 Phillies (they missed the pennant by a game), St. Louis and the (Los Angeles) Dodgers. They didn't have anywhere near (the talent) that we have here.

"All I want is 55 more wins. That will make 95 and that should be enough (to win the division). I smelled the roses in 1964, but they just went to another team. This team has the will to grind it out. I don't think anyone in this room has been on one like this before. I just hope we're talking the same way 55 wins from now."

COQUITLAM — Burnaby Cablevision outscored Coquitlam J-Hawks by 15-2 in the final period Wednesday in posting a 21-11 win in a Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League game at Coquitlam Sports Centre.

Dave Redline was top sniper for Burnaby with four goals and Butch Stewart scored three times for the J-Hawks.

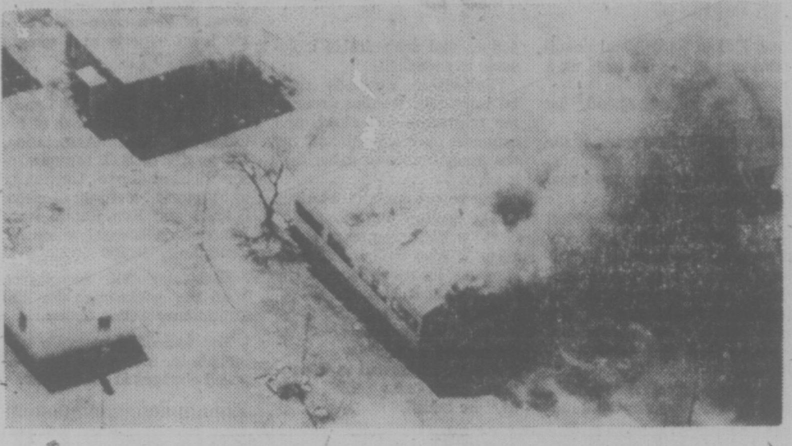
The Racial Powderkeg That Is Called Soweto



Building blazes after it was set afire by Soweto rioters.

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — The sprawling black township of Soweto is Africa's ninth largest city, but many maps don't even show it. For years it has been a racial powderkeg.

The fuse was lit Wednesday by students protesting white control of their education. Twenty-six persons were reported killed and more than 220 injured in South Africa's worst riots since the Sharpeville massacre 16 years ago.

Unrest has seethed for years among the one million blacks who live in Soweto. Acute shortages of housing, social amenities and public services add to the discontent in Africa's biggest ghetto.

Soweto, an acronym for South Western Townships, is a satellite city for the blacks who work the mines and industries of Johannesburg, South Africa's modern commercial capital 12 miles to the northwest.

The township covers 26 square miles and has an official population of 838,511. There also are an estimated 175,000 illegal residents. Blacks cannot buy the land they live on, and more than 18,000 families are on a waiting list for houses.

Soweto has about 100,500 homes—neat, four-room cubicles that stretch in monotonous row after row along treeless roads and dirt paths.

Most of the houses are crowded. Only a third have electricity, and plumbing is scarce. But Soweto's residents enjoy a higher standing of living than blacks in other African urban centres. In Dube, the prestige suburb of Soweto, the small black middle class lives in attractive homes.

Government officials claim that Soweto, once a dreary slum, is one of the largest slum clearance projects in the world. But it also is a bleak symbol of South Africa's apartheid policy of segregation and separate racial development, which refuses to accept mixing of the races.

The blacks have been relegated to Soweto, but their city has only two movie houses, two banks and no supermarket. White businessmen want the blacks to shop in Johannesburg.

Because of the shortage of electricity, many students must study by oil lamp or candlelight.

"A backyard of Johannesburg. Rows of monotonous, bare brick matchboxes suddenly appeared behind the mine dumps . . . a huge blanket of overpowering coal smoke which hangs over the township greeted us. My heart sank. . . .

"Most of the residents of Soweto, I found, proudly carried stab marks or have been clubbed at one time or another by thugs."

Soweto's crime rate is high. Police reported 701 murders, 1,296 rapes and 8,118 cases of assault between July 1, 1974 and June 30, 1975. Much of the crime is blamed on drinking.

"Soweto is the black city, proud, tidy, humble, poor, occasionally rich, soccer-crazy, pulsating and church-going," says Constance Khuziwe Nishona, a community leader and businesswoman who has lived there since she was 12.

According to official figures, there are 167 churches in the township but an estimated 900 different sects.

"You may ask: 'Why so much violence?'" Mrs. Nishona continued. "One reason for it is . . . continual suppression and a crying need to say, 'Take notice of us — we are people.'"

After a few hours in Soweto, some visitors are obsessed by the smog, the dreary monotony of the houses, the dust, the poverty, the lack of sidewalks and modern stores.

Others who have seen the misery of slums elsewhere in black Africa are impressed by the tidiness, the neat houses instead of shanties, the number of cars owned by blacks, the organization.

More than 200,000 blacks commute each day in crowded trains and buses from Soweto to Johannesburg.

R. R. Crawford, U.S. assistant secretary of housing and urban development, who visited South Africa several months ago, said Soweto and other black townships are "modified concentration camps."

Reluctant U.K. Unions Accept Pay Restraints

LONDON (WP) — Britain's powerful union chiefs Wednesday voted overwhelmingly to curb the wages of their 10 million members for the second year in a row.

By a margin of nearly 18 to 1, the Trades Union Congress agreed to limit pay increases to an average of 4.5 per cent in the year starting Aug. 1.

Since prices are expected to rise twice as fast, this means most workers will again suffer a cut in living standards.

The bitter pill will be sweetened somewhat by Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey.

In return for the pay curbs, he will cut lower-bracket taxes by $1.6 billion, but this will not make up all the loss in real wages.

The union leaders got up to pledge the faith Wednesday in the domed Methodist Central near Westminster Abbey and the Houses of Parliament.

One by one, they strode to the microphone to say they were reluctant to do what they were doing.

They were unhappy about losing the freedom to bargain, their reason for being.

They were distressed at imposing further sacrifices on British workers whose pay averages about $118 a week.

But almost all the unionists agreed they had no choice. To reject the pay curb would force an election and probably drive the Labor government from office.

Whatever its shortcomings, it bargains and does not dictate to unions, an approach they ascribe to the Conservatives.

On the economic side, union leaders — except for diehard Marxists — displayed broad understanding of the role that the wage explosion two years ago played in Britain's horrendous inflation.

At one point last year, prices were rising at a 35 per cent rate. This in turn, the unionists acknowledged, help drive down the pound and lengthen the dole lines.

Unemployment here is now about 1.2 million or 5.4 per cent in a nation accustomed to less than half that level.

This past year, the unions approved and stuck by a deal limiting increases to six pounds ($10.70) a week or about 10 per cent. The restraint appears to have worked. Inflation is now running at 13 per cent, still very high but less than half of what it was a year ago.

QUEBEC WARNING ON SCIENTOLOGY

QUEBEC (CP) — The latest bulletin issued by the government's Consumer Protection Office contains a strong warning against enrolment in the Church of Scientology.

The April-May edition of the bulletin, called Protect Yourself, devotes almost four pages to the church and warns that scientology courses are over-priced and that the church feeds on the lonely or emotionally disturbed.

The bulletin says the church's founder, L. Ron Hubbard, is a millionaire "who was, in 1940, the author if cheap science fiction novels."

The Quebec Mouvemenr des Caiesses populaires Desjardins (credit unions) keeps an open file on the Church of Scientology and claims to be very reticent to lend to persons who wish to take its courses, the bulletin says.

Some managers of caisses populaires have reported that they have received loan application for up to $4,000 for persons who want to take scientology courses, the bulletin notes.

The bulletin says that it is possible to invest $30,000, $40,000 or more in the church as a member.

Hubbard's spokesmen say there are 60,000 disciples of the Church of Scientology in the country, the bulletin says, adding:

"It is quite clear, however that men and women who agree to borrow such large amounts to take these religion courses are victims of serious emotional difficulties or of great solitude."

The bulletin concluded "The philosophy of the Church of Scientology: to obtain security and inner peace so great the money and debts mean nothing."

Liberals Back Ont. Tories

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's minority Conservative government survived its third confidence test Wednesday with the help of Liberals who said the province's voters do not want an election.

The 78-to-35 vote, opposed by the NDP, followed the defeat Tuesday of the government's major farm-income stabilization bill.

Premier William Davis said he was prepared to call an election if the vote went against the government.

Liberal Leader Stuart Smith said his party would not force a summer election on the farm income bill and would support the government "until a matter of fundamental principle is brought before us."

He said the vote was "pure ritual" to allow the government to continue, despite Liberal opposition on policy issues.

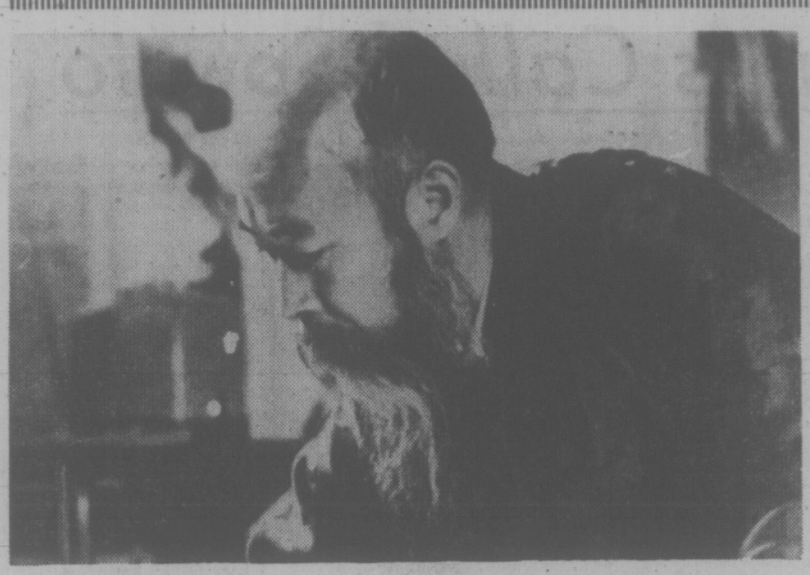
Stephen Lewis, NDP leader, said his party viewed the vote in the broader light of confidence in the government's performance.

He said a vote on the sole basis of avoiding an election was preposterous.

It was the third such test of government support since the Sept. 18 election which returned 51 Progressive Conservatives, 38 New Democrats and 36 Liberals to the 125-seat legislature.

The farm bill defeat Tuesday would have provided farmers with government subsidies on some commodities when prices fell below 90 per cent of the average price of the last five years. It would not have applied to products covered by similar federal legislation or controlled by marketing boards.

The opposition parties said the bill did not go far enough and combined to pass a resolution which requires the government to take a second look at the bill and re-introduce it no later than Oct. 31.



I-cheng Wu will stage workshops during his exhibits

CHINESE ART SHOWN

Apprenticeship to an artist-uncle in the Hupeh province of China at the age of eight started the life-long career of I-chen Wu, now a widely noted exponent of Chinese painting and calligraphy.

About 50 of the artist's works will be shown for 10 days at the Victoria Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Association, 636 Fisgard, starting today.

The exhibition is being sponsored by the association as one of a number of activities marking Dominion Day celebrations and coinciding with the Year of the Dragon. Exhibition hours are from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily including Sunday.

I-Cheng Wu, who now makes his home in San Jose, Calif., is also a well known lecturer and teacher (currently at the University of California at Santa Barbara), and is a Master of Arts of San Jose State University. He is listed in both the English and American Who's Who in Art.

During the Victoria showing of his work he will conduct three one-day workshops in painting and calligraphy for amateurs as well as professional artist.

First of these will be held Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Second and third are scheduled for June 24 and 26. A Chinese art lecture with colored slides will be given by Wu June 25 at 8 p.m. In addition he will give daily demonstrations of the brush techniques.

I-Cheng Wu's favorite subjects are bamboo, flowers, birds and other Chinese flora and fauna. Most of his painings are embellished with his own poems and his calligraphy includes standard, running, draft, and big seal (or Stone Drum) inscription styles.

Further information about the workshops, exhibit and lecture can be obtained by calling the artist at 384-7452.

Rail Case Court Bound

The B.C. Railway has no intention of settling a fraud and conspiracy charge against it out of court, Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said Wendesday.

Phillips was replying to a charge in the legislature by NDP leader Dave Barrett that the provincially-owned railway had set aside $12.5 million in the event that it either lost the case or settled out of cour to avoid publicity.

Barrett said the charges against the railway, laid by M. E. L. Paving, were too serious to be subjected to an out-of-court settlement.

Trial on the charge, arising out of a contract to M. E. L. Paving for work on the Dease Lake extension done in 1974, will be heard in Vancouver Oct. 4.

Phillips said the trial date had been postponed on the agreement of both parties.

Barrett, outside the house, described the court case as the "tip of the iceberg and it's an awfully rotten iceberg."

Store Heist 'Well-Engineered'

Saanich detective David Richardson, unable to testify because of a foot injury when trial adjourned May 22, said Mrs. Donna Desrochers identified William Harold Mack 27, and William Wallace Woods, 27, from a folio of 12 photographs.

Mrs. Desrochers told court earlier Mack and Woods were the two men she saw in a car near her house which is close to the Valu-Way grocery store, 101 West Burnside.

Her identification was made in the courtroom but Richardson said identification was also made April 3, 1975.

Mack and Woods are accused or robbing a clerk in the store of an unstated sum of money April 2, 1975.

The case was scheduled to go to the jury today after Judge E. J. C. Stewart gave his charge.

Crown counsel Dwight Whitson, in his summation, said the prosecution's theory is that both men surveyed the area prior to the robbery with Woods driving the car.

He said the robbery was "well-engineered and well-executed" and "conducted with some precision and some advance planning and that advance planning involved both accused persons."

He said various Crown witnesses established that Mack and another person registered at the Prince Charles Motel on Gorge Road around 4:30 p.m., that Woods was arrested at a service station at Gorge and Garbally at 4:55 p.m. Mack was arrested at the motel around 5 p.m. and found to have indentification on him which matched a name entered on the registration form.

Mrs. Desrochers said she saw Mack and Woods in a car about 4:05 p.m. and again at 4:15 to 4:20 p.m. and saw Mack five minutes later jump a fence and leap into a car which sped away, Whitson told the jury.

A civilian witness who couldn't make a positive identification saw two men in a car outside the store about 4:26 p.m. and the store clerk, also unable to make an identification, said the robbery occured at 4:25 p.m., he said.

Whitson also said a footprint found near the store was identical in size and similar in pattern to a pair of shoes found in Mack's motel room.

Mack's lawyer, Dean Wilson, told the jury there was no direct evidence that his client robbed the store. All the evidence was circumstantial and "full of doubt."

He urged the jury to look "very, very carefully" at Mrs. Desrochers' evidence on identification because the observations were made from her house into a parked car.

He also expressed doubt about time sequences, saying the store clerk had put the time at 4:25 p.m. when the robbery was completed, yet another witness saw two men in a car pull in behind him when he left the store around 4:26 p.m.

Wilson also said one policeman had admitted the shoes were of a very common type.

Bob Johnston, counsel for Woods, also questioned Mrs. Desrochers identification, saying she was at least 25 feet from the car in which she said Mack and Woods were sitting.

He also questioned her memory, saying she got the licence number of the car wrong when writing it down five minutes after seeing it.

He said there are "a lot of weak links" in the Crown's circumstantial case and a "very confusing time sequence."

Preserve Native Plants, Forest Centre Suggests

A recommendation urging the Capital Regional District to preserve where possible the native vegetation of the Victoria metropolitan area, is made in a Pacific Forest Research Centre report.

The Garry Oak and attractive wildflowers associated with the species, as well as wetlands, such as bogs and marshes, are cited as examples.

Pointing out one of the major attractions of the Greater metropoitan area is its unique landscapes, the report states the scarcity of oak parklands, even in a semi-natural state, recommends special effort to conserve remaining stands.

It also suggests that any mature stands of Douglas fir combined with swordferns, deserve preservation because spectacular-sized trees and lush undergrowth make attractive greenbelt scenery.

The report, illustrated and describing the various types of plant communities on the southern part of Vancouver Island, was prepared by forester Dr. R. G. (Bob) McMinn.

He was assisted by Slavoj Eis, Harry E. Hirvonen, Ed Oswald and John Senyk, all land use experts.

It was prepared for the planning department of the Capital Regional District.

Commenting on the report, McMinn said institutions also should make more use of native plants for landscaping instead of importing exotic conifers and shrubs from other parts of the continent.

"We bulldoze our native plants and replace them with the same plants growing in Boston, Philadelphia and other cities of North America," he said. We are 'homogenizing North America. This is unnecessary."

McMinn praised Saanich for launching a program to restore Swan Lake and Christmas Hill to its original conditions and to use the area as a nature sanctuary.

"This is thinking ahead," he said.

The report observes that the preservation of wetlands, such as bogs and marshes, has been neglected.

"Only two of the seven large peat bogs formerly present on the Saanich Peninsula remain," it points out. "They merit consideration for preservation because of the rare plants they contain and because of their scientific interest."

It also notes that wetlands add to the diversity of landscapes and are suitable inclusions in greenbelts.

"Salt-water wetlands may be important feeding grounds for migrating waterfowl, and estuaries are significant for the maintenance of fisheries," it adds.

The report contains sections on the geology and climate of Greater Victoria metropolitan area. It also includes a map showing locations of all the native plant communities.

Tegid C. Jones, a PFRC official, said the report will be distributed to schools.

"Anyone interested in the report, can obtain copies from us," he added.

Courtenay Hatchery Planned

COURTENAY — A major salmon hatchery is planned for the Puntledge River here.

George Reid, regional fisheries biologist, says federal fisheries engineers are surveying a site near the B.C. Hydro powerhouse for the hatchery and the project will be one of the first undertaken as soon as the treasury board approves the multi-million dollar federal government salmon enhancement program.

Estimated cost of the hatchery, expected to have a capability of rearing more than one million fish at a time, is between $2 million and $3 million.

DIVORCE TV TOPIC

Division of property and custody of children after a divorce will be discussed by a panel of Vancouver and Victoria legal experts at 7 tonight on Cable 10 TV.

The panel will include Donald Moir, chairman of family law for the B.C. branch of the Canadian Bar Association, University of B.C. law professor Richard Gosse, University of Victoria lecturer Jocelyn Gifford and Ron Rapin, legal information counsellor for the Community Action Group.

Moderator will be Sharon MacBain, spokesman for the Community Action Group.

The hour-long program will include a discussion on proposed changes in family law.

Global Food Outlook Gloomy, UN Told

By DAN MORGAN
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — United Nations conference in Rome was told this week that the world is sliding toward a global food disaster by 1985 unless nations change many of their food policies and also agree on much broader international co-operation.

The extremely gloomy assessment of the long-term food outlook was contained in documents prepare by the staff of the 36-member World Food Council, which began its second annual meeting in Rome Monday.

The papers warn of a grain deficit of 85 million tons in developing countries by 1985. The worst impact will be felt by 43 "food priority countries" which will not haye enough money to buy the extra food they will require if their farm output is not increased dramatically. The projected deficit is about double the one in 1974, a year when the world came close to running out of food.

"Food imports of the developing countries have risen alarmingly, their nutritional problems have grown and their production performance has not improved," one report states.

UN experts strongly challenge the theory that these developments are beyond man's control. While population growth and droughts contribute to the problem, vested political interests, agricultural lobbies and outmoded social policies also present formidable obstacles to boosting food output, they say.

'The world food problem is enormously political," said a UN official. "Almost every-thing that governments do in the agricultural area has domestic political repercussions. The result is that the situation is getting worse and there are no political leaders anywhere with a high level of concern."

A World Food Council report noted recently that food and fertilizer aid to needy nations has lagged behind goals, there is no agreement on a global system of world food reserves, or on a plan to reduce malnutrition worldwide, trade liberalization has been "more a matter of discussion than any real progress," and food production in developing countries is increasing more slowly than in the last decade.

World Food Council economists say developing countries will have to double the growth rate of their food opt and will need $7 billion to $8 billion annually in outside loans and aid to prevent disastrous shortages in the 1980s.

But the experts say that there are policy pitfalls as well. In rich and poor countries alike, farm policies and social policies pose huge obstacles to developing countries achieving more rapid growth of farm output.

In many rich countries, powerful agricultural lobbies extract government farm subsidies, which lead to big surpluses. These surpluses are sometimes dumped abroad at prices below what the ycost farmers to produce. When such cheap products are available, poorer nations are under less pressure to help their own farmers produce more food.

At other times, the surpluses in rich countries provide an excuse to ban food imports from poor nations — another discouragement to those farmers to grow more.

The General Accounting Office in Washington has a detailed list of policies and practices in poor countries that discourage local farmers from proruncng more.

For example: A Kenyan official told GAO analysts that before January 1975, farmers lost money if they used fertilizer, because it was so costly compared with the return on farm products.

—Indian policies in 1974 caused farmers to shift away from sowing wheat and to hoard grain, because the established wholesale and retail price ceilings for wheat were too low.

—In Tunisia, 90 per cent of the farmers could not qualify for bank loans, and in Brazil, 3 per cent of the farmers got 34 per cent of the loans, in the Phillippines, 27 per cent of the farmers received 98 per cent of the credits.

—In some developing countries such as Kenya and Tanzania, commercial agriculture is oriented toward export crops rather than crops that can be consumed at home, and farmers growing for export get most of the credit.

—Indonesia prohibited rice from being shipped between the islands, except under government auspices. Instead, the government relied on costly rice imports for those sections where rice was in short supply.

UN officials say efforts to change the world agricultural order fundamentally would encounter enormous political obstacles. Such changes might require goernments to take steps that are politically unfeasible, given the power of domestic agricultural groups and vested interests.

Therefore, they say, governments should organize a series of smaller, co-ordinated steps that could produce results without posing undue political difficulties,

Recall by AMC Over Problem With Back Seat

DETROIT (UPI)— American Motors Corp. is recalling 22,420 of its 1976 model Pacers to strengthen the rear seats which may not comply with U.S. safety standards.

AMC said some Pacers built between Dec. 4, 1975, and March 19, 1976, may contain a rear seat back hinge that cannot meet the requirements of a forward-pull test.

There have been no reported failures, accidents or injuries as a result of the safety problem, AMC said. Inspection and correction will be made by AMC dealers at no cost to car owners, the company said.

Hanoi Prizes Its Independence

By NAYAN CHANDA
The Washington Post

HANOI — There is a story now making the rounds in Hanoi's diplomatic circuit concerning the Soviet ambassador.

According to the tale, the ambassador, an avid angler, was busy keeping his eyes on four fishing lines he had sunk in Hanoi's Western Lake when a guard asked to see his tickets.

The ambassador had bought tickets only for two lines, and despite his protests and presentation of diplomatic credentials the guard removed two unauthorized fishing rods.

The story may well be apocryphal, but its circulation reflects the feeling of the diplomatic community about Hanoi's uncompromising independence.

Despite the praise heaped on the Soviet Union by the Vietnamese leaders as the first Socialist state in the world which rendered assistance in their struggle, Hanoi has so far not allowed the ties of solidarity and friendship to become a hindrance to its independence.

At the Soviet Party Congress in Moscow in February, Communist Party Secretary Le Duan sided unequivocally with the French and Italian Communist parties, which have been trying to chart an independent course free of Moscow's counsel.

The Vietnamese also have refused to allow Moscow or Peking to set up a consulate in Saigon, although the French have been allowed to operate a consulate on a "temporary basis."

Despite pressure from the Soviet news agency Tass to open a bureau in Saigon, authorities resisted the pressure for a year while Western newspapers and agencies continued operation until May 7. Some believe that had it not been for the pressure of the Soviets to get a toe-hold in Saigon, Western agencies would have been allowed to continue operation in somewhat reduced form.

While few foreign observers here doubt Hanoi's desire to maintain its independence, some see increasing difficulty in view of Vietnam's massive dependence on Soviet bloc aid and its territorial dispute and cool relations with China.

"It may sound pretty ironic, but the fact is that Vietnam today needs the United States to preserve its independence as much as it once needed help of the Socialist bloc to obtain it," said a Western observer who has lived in Hanoi for two years.

He argues that it is in America's interest to move quickly before the compulsions of Vietnam's domestic politics, economics and the evolving alighment in Asian politics force Hanoi into greater reliance on the Soviet bloc.

Although Vietnamese officials do not share this view, they leave no doubts in private conversation about the importance they attach to ties with the United States to bolster the country's newly embraced policy of non-alignment and to get its war-ravaged economy moving.

While the Hanoi media continue to attack the "outmoded and hostile policy" of the United States, foreign ministry officials seem to speak more with sadness than with anger when they say that gestures like the unconditional return of the bodies of five U.S. servicemen have not been reciprocated by Washington in any significant way.

"We understand the feeling of the families of the missing men and sympathize with them," Ngo Dien, the assistant to the foreign minister, said in an interview, "We are ready," he added, "to do our best in solving this question, but not under pressure — under the unilateral demand of the U.S. government."

Vietnamese officials say that they fail to understand how the United States can insist on fulfilling the article of the Paris agreement on men missing in action and also ignore other articles of the agreement binding on the United States. However, unlike U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, who in a recent television interview termed the solution of the issue as "the absolute precondition" for normalization of relations, the Hanoi officials did not seem to place similar emphasis on U.S. fulfilment of Article 21 of the agreement, which says the United States will "contribute to healing the wounds of war and to post-war reconstruction."

An official of an American company, who recently talked with Vietnamese officials, came away with the impression that Hanoii mentions the U.S. obligation under the Paris agreement as a point of reference, to remind Washington of its moral responsibility. Hanoi does not seem to have any illusion about getting the $3.25 billion in aid supposedly promised by former President Richard Nixon, but would want Washington to accept some sort of responsibility in rebuilding the bomb-shattered country.

Acceptance of this responsibility could be demonstrated by reconstruction aid as well as by permitting American business to bring its capital and technology to Vietnam.

Officials privately admit that President Ford's options are limited while he is faced with a right-wing political challenger such as Ronald Reagan. Once the electoral restrictions are gone, however, they hope the administration will shift.

TREASURE TROVE TRAIL TRACED

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — Indian tax officials are on the trail of what may be one of the world's biggest treasures of gold and jewels, hidden by a maharajah 250 years ago and now worth more than $3 billion.

An ancient document given to revenue authorities indicates the treasure was buried by the Maharajah of Jaipur at his palace in Rajasthan state. A survey of the palace has been ordered before digging begins.

Anything found will be shared between the Indian government and descendants of the maharajah, provided the treasure lies at a depth of less than 20 feet. An act of 1878 provides that any valuables burided below that depth belong to the government.

The trail began when an unidentified person, believed to be a gypsy who has disappeared, gave tax officials a parchment which said Maharajah Jaisinghji hid the treasure in a secret chamber in 1733.

Experts have confirmed that the parchment and ink are between 200 and 250 years old and a metal detector has shown something metallic at a spot indicated by the document.

The parchment said the hoard was then worth .32 billion rupees ($160 million). At today's value, that would be equivalent to about $3.2 billion.

Taiwan Contracts Missile Studies

Washington Post

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — A team of 15 engineers from a secret military research institute in Taiwan has been studying inertial guidance technology applicable to missilery at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology for the past 8 months.

MIT has subcontracted almost $400,000 of the total cost of Draper Laboratories, one of the nation's foremost weapons research centres.

Taiwan officials, a small number of MIT professors and Draper's head, Albert G. Hill, say the program is an economic development project. They say it is training Taiwan engineers to move into high-technology industry such as making navigation systems for planes and boats.

Others, encouraged by a small group of leftist, anti-Taiwan students at MIT, say that the program is primarily of military value.

Many State Department officials studying the program and a review committee appointed by MIT concluded recently that there is little commercial opportunity for Taiwan inertial navigation technology.

The 15 engineers admit that they are under contracts to return for four to five years to the Taiwan Ministry of Defence secret weapons laboratory, the Chung Shan Research Institute.

MIT officials said they were unaware of these contracts until recently.

Several U.S. intelligence officials said that there is a secret project at the research institute to develop a medium-range missile and a nuclear device.

They said that Taiwan already has the expertise and material to build a nuclear device similar to the one India exploded.

Taiwan has a small facility for separating plutonium, two research reactors and six nuclear power reactors under construction or in planning.

Player's Trial Adjourned

The preliminary hearing for Western Canada Hockey League player Peter Goertz, charged with assault causing bodily harm, has been adjourned to Sept. 8.

The hearing had been orginally set to begin Wednesday in Saskatoon but Goertz's lawyer told the court he was tied up with another trial and thus requested an adjournment.

Goertz, a player with the Saskatoon Blades is alleged to have been involved in a bench-clearing brawl that erupted in a game with the Victoria Cougars last Feb. 20.

Victoria players Greg Tebutt and Tim Williams have also been charged, Tebutt with two counts of assault causing bodily harm and Williams with one count.

Saskatoon prosecutor Del Peeras said today he expected the hearing would take two days.

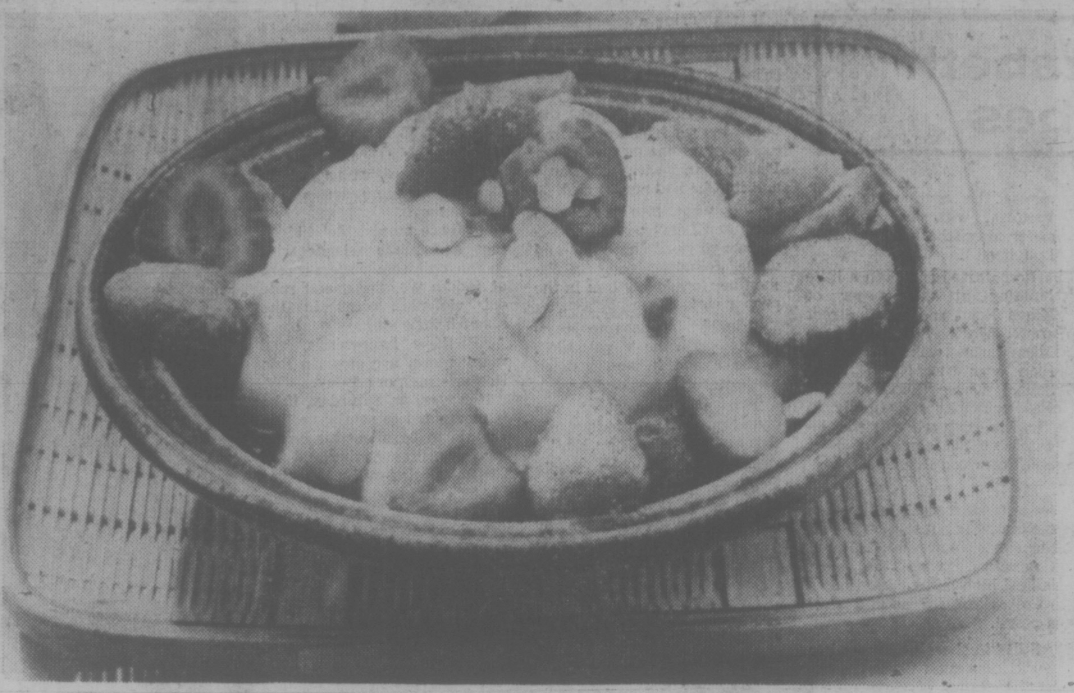
Strawberries—the June Jewels



The busy berry season is with us once again, so don't be left wanting this year. Remember the phrase "Here today, gone tomorrow," true of many things, but unfortunately all too true of luscious fresh strawberries. A few tips on buying and handling will help you get the most out of them.

"Caps off" may mean good manners, but not with regard to strawberries. Berries keep longest with caps on. This shows they have been handled gently and are not overripe. The best berries are fragrant, solid red, well-formed and have a shiny appearance. Flavor depends upon variety and ripeness, not upon size.

Berries are not crease resistant or bruise proof, so bring them home quickly and sort them to remove the bruised ones. Refrigerate in a flat pan covered loosely with waxed paper and use within two days. Wash just before serving.

Don't soak strawberries in water — they swell up, lose flavor and nutritive value. Just dip gently and quickly in cold water, lifting them out immediately to let sand dirt fall to the bottom. Remove caps after the berries are clean and dry.

Strawberries go well at any time of the day. Enjoy them slightly sweetened before breakfast or slice them onto cereal. Include them in a fruit salad for lunch, and for dinner slice fresh berries on top of a vanilla cream or custard pie filling. For special treats, Food Advisory Services, Agriculture Canada have tested a "Fresh Strawberry Roll" and a "Strawberry Swirl" especially for you and they say both are utterly delicious!

STRAWBERRY SWIRL

Crust

1 cup graham wafer crumbs
1 tablespoon sugar
¼ cup butter, melted

Combine ingredients. Press into 8-inch square cake pan. Chill.

Filling

2 tablespoons sugar
2 cups sliced strawberries (about 1 pint)
1 3-ounce package strawberry jelly powder
1 cup boiling water
1 cup syrup from strawberries plus water
5 cups miniature marshmallows
½ cup milk
½ pint (1¼ cups) whipping cream, whipped

Sprinkle sugar over strawberries, let stand ½ hour. Drain, reserving syrup. Dissolve jelly powder in boiling water. Stir in syrup from strawberries plus water. Chill until partially set. Fold in strawberries. Combine marshmallows and milk, stir and cook till marshmallows melt. Cool. Fold in whipped cream. Siwrl marshmallow mixture into gelatin. Pour over crumb crust. Chill 2 hours. Makes nine squares.

Strawberry Almond Float

2 envelopes (2 tablespoons) unflavored gelatin
½ cup sugar
3½ cups milk
2 teaspoons almond extract
1 pint fresh California strawberries, sliced
Sliced almonds

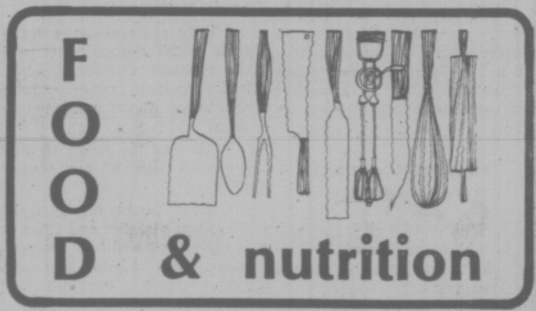
In saucepan, combine gelatin and sugar. Stir in 1 cup of the milk. Heat, just until gelatin dissolves. Remove from heat. Add remaining milk and almond extract. Pour into 1 quart mold. Chill until firm.

Meanwhile sweeten sliced berries to taste. At serving time, invert mold onto dessert plate. Unmold. Surround with berries. Sprinkle with sliced almonds. Serve at once.

Makes 6 servings.

Note: Can be molded in 6 custard cups, as well, for individual servings.

HOT ROLLS AT THE READY



By MARY MOORE

You will think I am exaggerating when I describe these Eveready Rolls.

The basic idea came from Mrs. C.F.H. in Chatham, Ontario. Maureen is perfecting her yeast baking technique so she took the recipe to try. She made some minor changes and came up with a major triumph — inexpensive refrigerator rolls, the dough of which will keep a week or 10 days refrigerated and covered and are ever so professional. You break off the amount you need when you want rolls and leave remaining for next time.

EVERREADY ROLLS

½ c. lukewarm water
1 tsp. sugar (first amount)
1 pkg. yeast
¼ c. shortening (room temperature)
⅓ c. granulated sugar (second amount)
1 egg unbeaten
1½ c. water
5 c. unsifted all-purpose flour
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. baking powder

In a one-cup measure dissolve the 1 teaspoon sugar in the ½-cup lukewarm water. Sprinkle over yeast and let stand 10 minutes. Stir down with spoon.

In the meantime in large bowl combine the shortening, ⅓ cup sugar and egg and mix as well as possible. Stir in yeast mixture, 1½ cups water, flour, salt and baking powder to thoroughly combine.

Turn dough out onto board floured with about ¼ cup flour. Knead 8 to 10 minutes or 250 times. (NOTE: The dough is VERY STICKY and will stick to counter or board but do not be tempted to add more flour. Do the best you can.). Put dough in medium-sized, greased bowl and rotate to grease all surfaces. Cover top of dough snugly with saran, then cover bowl with lid. Refrigerate.

When needed grease a round or square 9" pan. Dough will rise a little so punch it down. Break off pieces and roll into balls about 1¾ to 2" in diameter between floured palms.

Place seven balls around outside of pan and one in centre about ¾" apart. Let warm to room temperature and then rise until doubled and touching. (This takes about 2½ hours.) Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. 10 to 12 minutes. Remove from oven and immediately brush tops with melted butter and tip into napkin-lined basket and serve HOT.

Sardines and Rice

⅛ medium size onion
1 green pepper, seeded
3 cloves of garlic
3 tablespoons of tomato paste
½ cup of natural or brown rice
2½ cups of water
1 small can of carrots and peas
2 cans (3½ oz. each) sardines.

1. Slice the onion and pepper and mince 3 cloves of garlic. Saute these in the olive oil until the pepper and onion become soft.

2. Add the tomato paste and rice.

3. Pour in water and cook covered over low heat until water is absorbed.

4. Add the carrots and peas and sardines. Return to low heat until it becomes hot, then stir it up and serve with a tossed salad.

FRESH STRAWBERRY ROLL

4 egg yolks
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
4 egg whites
½ cup sugar
¾ cup cake and pastry flour
¾ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
Icing sugar

Line bottom of greased 10½x15½-inch jelly roll pan with greased waxed paper. Beat yolks until light. Gradually beat in ¼ cup sugar. Add vanilla. Beat whites until stiff but not dry.

Gradually beat in ½ cup sugar and continue beating until glossy. Fold in yolk mixture. Sift dry ingredients and fold into egg mixture. Turn into prepared pan. Bake 8 to 10 minutes at 400 degree F. Sieve icing sugar on dish towel to lightly cover.

FILLING

½ pint (1¼ cups) whipping cream, whipped
2 tablespoons icing sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups sliced strawberries (about 1 pint)

Beat whipped cream, icing sugar and vanilla together. Unroll cake and spread with cream. Arrange strawberries on top. Reroll and refrigerate 2 hours.

Sprinkle with icing sugar and garnish with strawberries if desired. Makes 10 to 12 slices. Note: May be spread on a commercial jelly roll if desired.

Ph.Ds a Glut On the Market

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI)— A new study indioates that U.S. colleges will be producing more Ph.D. scholars in the next 15 years and needing them less.

The study, by Allan Cartter for the Carnegie Commission of Higher Education, suggests that while universities are hiring about half of current crop of Ph.D.s, the figure will drop to 35 per cent for the rest of the 1970s and down as low as 20 per cent in the next decade.

A Diamond Milestone for a Rare Gem

elizabeth forbes

In the more than 80 years he has lived, Ron Heater has been active in sports in music and in the business world.

He has boxed with Tommy Burns; given banjo lessons to King Edward VIII, when he was Prince of Wales; met and exchanged ideas with Eddie Peabody, once the Banjo King of the World, and been named a Banjo King himself, when he played in Cecil Heaton's orchestra and also with George Ozard here.

In business he can boast of having fitted shoes on the feet of several generations of Victoria men and women, up to the time he retired, three years ago.

However, I'm willing to wager, that in his thinking, the finest moment of his life is coming up this Saturday, when he and his wife Myrtie celebrate their 60th wedding anniversary.

They were married in St. John's Church on June 19, 1916, Rev. Chadwick officiating; and with exception of the first few years, have lived in their present home on Prior Street ever since.

They have two sons, Capt. Allan Heater, of the B.C. Ferries, and Capt. Gordon Heater, with the C.P.R.; also four grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Plans have been made to celebrate the anniversary quietly with a family dinner party at the Empress Hotel.

Myrtie Lee Phillips, a direct descendent, on her father's side, of the famed Shawnee Chief Tecumseh, was born in Tennessee.

She lived there until 1910 when she came, as a teenager to Victoria with her mother, who was children's nurse with the pioneer J. O. Cameron family.

During a time when she was hostess in the Dominion Hotel, she met Ron Heater. They became engaged and shortly after, were married.

Quiet and retiring by nature, Myrtie Heater has devoted married life to her home and her family.

Today, she is still the centre of that family, among whom she is lovingly called "our Tennessee Belle", and the Prior Street home is still the centre of her life.

Ron Heater too, was born a long way from here — at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, where his grandfather, one of several generations of sea-going folk, was a deep sea captain and later keeper of the light.

Shortly after Ron was born, his father, Capt. William Heater, came to the Pacific Coast, via the Panama, to go into the sealing trade.

When he was six months old, his mother came by train across the continent and to Victoria, with him and his sister May (the late Mrs. Roy Lougheed.).

Ron started school in a little building at the corner of Kings Road and Third Street (now Wark Street) where Miss Lucas was in charge; then went to North Ward School where Leonard Tait was principal and finally to Victoria High when it was located at the corner of Fort and Fernwood Road.

He left school in his early teens to start work in the shoe department at David Spencer's (now the T. Eaton Company), "when the finest ladies' high buttoned kid boots were selling for around $3.50 a pair".

Still "in shoes" he moved to work for a man named Bray, at the corner of Government and Johnson, and then for Gilbert Christie, at the same location.

Eventually he went to the Mundays with whom he stayed for 58 years, retiring in 1973 as manager of their Douglas Street store.

It was during his teens, when he was active in the Y.M.C.A. (then on Broad Street) as a boxer, wrestler and as captain of a Pacific Coast champion junior track team, that he met Tommy Burns who was to be heavy weight champion of the world.

"Burns was training at the old Willows fair grounds," Ron remembers "Dave Spencer and John Virtue, proprietor of the first Oak Bay Hotel, took me to see him work out and it ended with an invitation to go in and box with him."

By then Ron was also twanging a banjo and he was so good Cecil Heaton, in charge of the David Spencer music department, asked him to play in his orchestra.

"Heaton was in demand for all the big dances and social affairs," Ron says, "So I was often at Government House and in the private homes of Victoria's Rockland Avenue and Uplands families."

It was during a select party the Dunsmuirs gave at Hatley Park that Ron met Edward, Prince of Wales, later to be Edward VIII.

"The Prince played the banjo too, and he wanted me to show him one or two things I was doing with my banjo and that he had never tried.

"We went into a private room and I showed him several new ways of chording; and while doing it, tried to remember to address him in the proper way.

"Finally he became exasperated with the 'royal stuff', as he called it, and insisted we forget it.

"So, at his request, we ended up with him calling me Ron and me called him Ed."

Years later, when Eddie Peabody, then the banjo king of the world, came to Victoria to play at an automobile show in the Memorial Arena, Ron Heater was invited to meet him.

"We talked about the banjo, about his work and my interest in banjo music. He was a fine gentleman!"

As a child Ron remembers holidays spent with his mother, sister May and a brother Walter, who died when he was 19, aboard their father's 100-foot schooner Libbey, when he cruised up and down the west coast, recruiting crews, both white and Indian, for sealing seasons in the far north.

On those jaunts, the chidren met and made friends with Indian children, were present at Indian weddings, and rode out violent storms in the staunch little ship.

All these happenings, and many more, are clear in Ron Heater's memory today.

However, on Saturday, if he is persuaded to reminisce, it's certain to be about his courting days, his wedding and the 60 years of family life that have brought so much happiness.

And when the family proposes a toast to Myrtie and Ron, at that dinner party in the Empress Hotel, you can be sure they will be holding hands, just as they did when he proposed to her, over 60 years ago.

SHRIMP: OUT OF THE OCEAN AND INTO SOUPS AND SAUCES

craig claiborne

If there is anything out of the ocean with more virtues than shrimp, we'd be hard put to name it.

Shrimp are elegant in soups; they adapt well to almost all sauces, whether based on eggs and oil, lemon and oil or flour and cream; and they can be delectable sweet and sour, hot or cold. Shrimp taste good with an infinitive variety of seasonings and flavors, and two cases in point are the dishes listed here. One is an excellent baked-shrimp-and-eggplant dish; the other an appetizer flavored with dill and capers and lightly laced wit cognac.

BAKED EGGPLANT AND SHRIMP

1¼ pounds eggplant
3 tablespoons flour
Salt and freshly ground pepper
¾ cup olive oil, approximately
1½ pounds red, ripe, fresh tomatoes or 3 cups drained, imported canned tomatoes
1½ pounds fresh raw shrimp, shelled and deveinved
¾ cup fresh bread crumbs
1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley
2 tablespoons finely chopped garlic
½ teaspoon dried thyme.

1. Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

-2 Trim off and discard the ends of the eggplant and peel the eggplant. Cut the eggplant into one-inch cubes. There should be about four or five cups.

3. Dredge the cubes in four seasoned with salt and pepper to taste.

4. Heat about one-third of the oil in a skillet and when it is piping hot add half the eggplant. Cook, tossing and stirring, until eggplant is browned. Drain the eggplant and add more oil and the remaining cubes of eggplant. Cook, tossing and stirring, until eggplant is browned. Drain the eggplant and add more oil and the remaining cubes of eggplant. Cook, tossing and stirring, until the ggplant is browned. Drain the eggplant very well to rid it of excess oil. Reserve the oil.

5. If fresh tomatoes are used, peel and see them. Cut the tomatoes into one-inch cubes. There should be about three cups. If canned tomatoes are used, chop them coarsely. Add to a saucepan and simmer about 10 minutes. Add salt and pepper to taste.

6. Add the reserved oil to a skillet and add the shrimp. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and cook just until the shrimp turn pink.

7. Spoon equal amounts of eggplant into six baking dishes. Add equal portions of shrimp to each dish. Spoon equal amounts of tomato over the shrimp.

8. Combine the bread crumbs, parsley, garlic and thyme. Blend well and sprinkle this over the eggplant-shrimp-tomato mixture. Sprinkle about one teaspoon of olive oil over each serving and bake 10 minutes. Run briefly under the broiler to glaze.

Yield: Six servings.

SHRIMP WITH DILL AND CAPERS

2 pounds shrimp, about 48 to 54
Salt and fresnly ground pepper
4 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons chopped dill
¼ cup capers
Juice of one lemon
3 tablespoons cognac, optional.

1. Peel and devein the shrimp. Sprinkle with salt and pepper to taste.

2. Heat the butter and when it is very hot add the shrimp. Cook, stirring, about four to five minutes. Add the dill, capers, lemon juice, and salt and pepper to taste. If desired, flame with the cognac. Serve hot.

Yield: Six to eight servings.

DEBBIE, 8, KNEW WHAT SHE WANTED

BOSTON (UPI) — Debbie Cook is eight years old. But she knows what she wants.

She went shopping for dresses three weeks ago and didn't like what she found. So she complained.

She wrote a letter to Filene's department store, saying:

"Dear Filene's:

"I am Debbie Cook. I take size 7 or 8 dresses. I would like to know why you don't make kids' dresses as cute as babies' dresses. I like dresses with ducks, animals and other stuff. Kids like cute dresses, to (sic). Here are some dresses I like. Thank you. "Love, Debbie."

She accompanied the letter with a page full of dress designs. They contained "ducks, animals and other stuff."

On Monday a delivery man arrived at the suburban Brookline home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cook, Debbie's parents. He had a package and a letter from Franklin Simon, president of Filene's.

The letter said:

"Dear Debbie:

"I couldn't have been more pleased to have your letter and your suggestions for dresses you would like to have. You shall have at least one of them because we had your design with a duck made up for you.

"We hope you will enjoy it as much as we enjoyed hearing from you. Tell us from time to time how you think we are doing in our dress selections. We care a lot that you care about Filene's. Thanks a lot."

Homemakers know that the time and effort they spend on canning will save them work and money later on, when they want to prepare wholesome meals for their families.

Before you begin to can, and even before you buy or gather garden produce for canning, read the 24-page booklet "Canning Canadian Fruits and Vegetables." It tells you what equipment and what type of containers you will need. It also explains how to prepare your produce. Don't use any fruits and vegetables which are not yet ripe, over-ripe, bruised or spotted.

If you find the seal is not air-tight, use up the food before it perishes. Reprocessing is not recommended, because this would over cook the food. After one week examine every container.

... With Just a Grain of Salt

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

By DR. JEAN MAYER

Salt is a tasty seasoning, so much so that the average American consumes about 10 times more than he needs. Because of our massive annual intake, whenever nutritionists and doctors talk about salt, they usually warn against a possible link between overconsumption and hypertension and other conditions.

But, many people forget that salt is more than a seasoning; sodium and chloride, which make up common table salt, are essential nutrients. Sodium is found in many foods, particularly animal products and certain vegetables. But chloride is less available, although it is present in meats, milk, and eggs. A diet high in grains, which the majority of the world's population has consumed throughout history, may be low in both sodium and chloride unless table salt is added.

A glance at history attests to the vital role of salt. Wars have been fought over the control of salt deposits. Renaissance Venice owed a large part of its wealth to the salt harvested from its lagoons. To the Greeks and Romans, salt was as good as gold, which is why we still say a person is "worth his salt." The world "salary" is from the Latin word "salarium," which was the money given soldiers to buy salt.

What is the precise role of salt in the body? Sodium and chloride. Most of the chloride, water and other minerals, especially potassium, are essential in maintaining the body's internal equilibrium. Here is how it works:

If you weigh about 120 pounds, you body contains three to four ounces of sodium and less than two ounces of chloride. Most of hte chloride, and more than half the sodium, is carried in the extracellular fluid, which bathes every cell. This is often referred to as our "internal sea" because its mineral content so closely resembles the primeval oceans from which our aquatic ancestors originated. The fluid inside the cells, however, is different, and here potassium is the chief mineral. Together, these minerals maintain the acid-alkaline (base) balance.

Cells function best when they are in a near neutral medium. Even though the diet may vary, the acid-base balance must stay near its normal value or the person will die. Chloride, phosphorus and sulfur all are acid-forming elements, while sodium, potassium calcium and magnesium all form bases. If you eat a well-rounded diet, you will consume adequate amounts of these minerals, which are so essential to maintaining the acid-base balance.

But the body has elaborate means of adjusting to the vagaries of even a normal diet. This is one of the main functions of the kidneys, which dispose of excessive acidic or alkaline substances by excreting them in the urine.

Sodium is expecially important in maintaining the concentration of minerals in the extracellular fluids, which is essential for proper function of the muscles and nerves. (Potassium plays a similar role for intracellular fluids.) Normally, the balanced concentration of minerals on both sides of the cellular membranes keeps up an even osmotic pressure, which enables water and other products to move into the cells, and waste products to move out.

Suppose, however, that you are lost in the wilderness without water. Your body will continue to lose moisture, and gradually the extracellular fluid will become highly concentrated, principally with sodium. Osmosis then drives water out of the cells to rebalance the mineral concentration, and the cells shrink, becoming dehydrated. Without water to replenish the fluids, death soon follows.

Or, suppose you are running a long-distance race on a hot day, or performing some other physical activity. You will sweat away a lot of body water, sodium and chloride. If you then drink copiously, you will more than replace the lost water, but the intracellular fluid becomes too concentrated. The cells will take in more water and expand. You may then develop a form of cramps known as "stokers' disease," so named for coal stokers who once toiled in boiler rooms of old-fashioned steamships.

In this case, extra salt will be needed to redress the balance. Within a few days of such activity, the body will adjust by excreting low-salt sweat and urine, and the additional salt intake is no longer necessary.

Organic conditions, such as liver or kidney disease or hormonal imbalances, can cause salt retention, which, in turn, means that water is retained to dilute the extracellular fluid, causing edema. This is why cutting back on salt often helps dieters to lose weight steadily, because the body is less likely to retain water.

As you can see, sodium and chloride are indeed essential to life. But, as with all nutrients, too much of a good thing is detrimental to health. If you consume about a quarter teaspoon of salt a day, you will get all the sodium and chloride your body requires. to avoid overconsumption, pass up the salt shaker and learn to season with herbs, vinegars, lemon, peppers and other condiments.

A Canape

Mince five sweet gherkins and a medium size onion. Put them in a bowl and add five tablespoons of lemon juice. Add a 3½-oz. can of sardines, drained, and an 8-ounce packet of cream cheese.

Blend all this with a fork and use it to spread on crackers.

Mother Haunted By Death of Twin

DEAR ABBY: This problem is driving me crazy, and I've got to get to the bottom of it to have some peace of mind.

I was married at 17 and had a pair of twin girls at 18. I've been married now for 34 years, but I still have a big question nagging at me.

I gave birth to the twins in a New York City hospital, which I still live near. My doctor didn't know I was going to have twins until I was giving birth. After one baby came, thinking it was all over, I heard the doctor say, "Wait, there's another one coming!" (I was conscious the whole time.)

I said, "I don't want it!" The doctor calmed me by saying, "Don't worry, I'll take it."

Abby, I really think that doctor gave my second baby away. I saw both babies alive and crying at birth, but the next day I was told the second baby had died. We never were given a birth certificate or a death certificate, and neither my husband nor I ever saw the "dead" baby.

A few weeks ago, someone told me that my baby never died, and I can still look into the matter. I really think she's alive. The doctor is probably dead by now, but I know his name. Would the hospital still have those records? Would they let me see them? Do I need a lawyer? Don't tell me to forget it, I have to know.

I promise not to hurt anyone or sue the hospital — J.M.

DEAR J.M.: You say you "gave birth to twins" some 34 years ago and now you want to know what happened to the second baby? A lawyer could help you search the records and take affidavits from any person present at the event.

But another question hangs in the air: Why did you wait for so long? (P.S. If you can establish the fact that you had twins, and no birth or death certificate was ever filed, the hospital is vulnerable to serious action.)

DEAR ABBY: A lady signed TEETH ON MY HANDS wrote that she had six sets of dentures from deceased relatives and didn't know what to do with them.

You should tell her to drop them off at the local undertaker's. In my home town, it was a common practice for the bums and others of lesser means to stop by the back door and "try on for size" the used choppers. — TRAVELIN' MAN.

DEAR MAN: Recycled dentures? You're putting' me on!

DEAR ABBY: I never cease to be amazed at some of the letters you get, and no less so at some of your answers.

Any woman who would stretch herself out on the couch, stark naked, to "surprise" her husband when he came home from work must be crazy.

If I ever pulled a stunt like that, my husband would have kicked me out of the door and thrown my clothes out after me, and that would have been the end of our marriage! — BORN 50 YEARS TOO SOON.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my in-laws: When I married their son (three years ago) I had a beautiful, 2-year-old daughter who had been born out of wedlock. Debbie never saw her "real" father, so the only relatives she has are mine.

My in-laws let me know from the beginning that they would never accept Debbie as their grandchild. They even asked her to call them "Mr. and Mrs. Brown"!)

This never bothered me much until I gave birth to Johnny, who is nearly 2 now.

Last Christmas my in-laws showered Johnny with expensive gifts signed, "With love from Grandma and Grandpa." Little Debbie got a cheap toy with a card, "From the Browns."

Abby, don't you think it's utterly ridiculous for one of my children to call my in-laws "Grandma and Grandpa," and the other "Mr. and Mrs. Brown"?

This situation is tearing me apart. What do you advise? — HURT.

DEAR HURT: Where is your husband while all this is going on? If he puts up with it, shame on him. You have every right to avoid your in-laws and prevent them from seeing Johnny until they can treat both children equally. They are wrong, wrong, wrong!

Fruit Whips Lifesavers

To economy-minded consumers, skim milk powder is a boon to the budget. It's a nourishing, convenient food that can be used as a beverage or in any recipe that calls for milk. It also has one added advantage — it can be whipped!

Cold water, lemon juice and skim milk powder are beaten together until the mixture stands in firm peaks. This is most acceptable when the accompanying flavor is a distinct one such as orange, plum and pineapple. Food Advisory Services, Agriculture Canada offer these tested recipes of "Fruit Whips." They're real lifesavers when it comes to fresh summer desserts.

FRUIT WHIPS

Orange Whip

½ cup cold water
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2-3 cup skim milk powder
Dash salt
1-3 cup sugar
3 tablespoons frozen concentrated orange juice OR
2-3 cup fresh orange juice
½ teaspoon grated orange rind

Combine water, lemon juice, skim milk powder and salt. Beat until mixture stands in firm peaks (about 8 minutes). Gradually beat in sugar then orange juice. Add grated rind. Chill. 6 servings.

Plum Whip

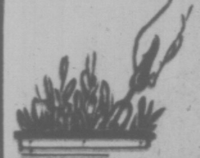
½ cup cold water
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2-3 cup skim milk pwder
Dash salt
1 tablespoon sugar
1 7½-ounce jar strained plums

Make as Orange Whip but use strained plums in place of orange juice. Fold into whipped mixture. Six servings.

Pinapple Whip

½ cup cold water
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2-3 cup skim milk powder
Dash salt
¼ cup sugar
1 14-ounce can crushed pineapple, drained

Make as Orange Whip but use pineapple in place of orange juice. Fold into whipped mixture. Six servings.



indoor gardens

By LYNN AND JOEL RAPP

Dear Lynn and Joel:

I have a problem with some plants I bought called Ladies' Purses. They seem to be wilting away in spite of the fact that I've kept them in good light and given them house plant food as directed. Please tell me what the trouble could be and what to do. They are so beautiful that I just can't bear the thought of losing them. — G.H.

Dear G.H.:

What you have, we suspect, are Cinerarias, also known as the Pocketbook Plant. This flowering beauty is, indeed, among the most colorful and beautiful specimens in the kindgom, but, unfortunately, like some other purses made by humans instead of Mother Earth, they don't last very long. (On the other hand, they don't cost as much as a Gucci or Christian Dior purse, either.)

Actually, Cineraria (which is an annual — has only a one-year life span) should be considered as being in the same category with cut flowers, even though they're potted up when you get them. They simply won't last longer than two or three weeks in the house. It's possible we'll get letters now from people who tell us they culture Cinerarias indoors all year long. But if we do, we'll be very surprised, since in all the years we've had experience with these plants we've never seen them maintained very long, even in a greenhouse or planted in a garden outdoors.

To keep them as long as possible, place them in a bright cool spot, water daily, mist frequently and enjoy them while you can. We don't know what you paid for them, but whatever it was we're sure they'll last long enough for you to feel content that you got your money's worth. It's a shame you can't repair one of Nature's Ladies' Purses the way you can a purse you bought at your local department store; but, on the other hand, you'll never find a purse that beautiful at the department store, either.

'HUMAN FRAILTY' IN SEX SCANDALS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Six clergymen members of the House of Representatives say they can understand how some of their colleagues could be involved in sex scandal allegations.

"This a terribly lonely place," said Rep. Andrew Young, D-Ga., for 22 years a minister of the United Church of Christ and one of seven clergymen in the House.

"We work 14 hours a day, six or seven days a week. Some of us are away from our families. Loneliness sets in. The human factor sets in. Some of them weaken," said Rep. Robert Edgar, a minister of the United Methodist Church.

Rep. Tennyson Guyer, a minister of the Churches of God in North America for 38 years, said, "I was not offended" by the allegations, "knowing the human frailty."

Guyer also said: "We're getting an epidemic. Many people are getting hurt. Wrongdoing by public officials is not what we're trying to make it. A Library of Congress study showed of the 525,000 federal state and local elected officials, less than 300 last year were found guilty of breaking a law."

Eaton Hid Pistol In PJs

TORONTO (CP) — John Craig Eaton hid a pistol in his pyjamas and waited for the chance to shoot a man who was kidnapping his daughter early Tuesday, police said Wednesday.

Eaton's plans to shoot the intruder, who was preparing to abduct his 14-year-old daughter Signy, failed because the gun became visible when he was ordered to roll on his back so his hands could be tied. His wife Sherry also was tied.

The daughter of the 39-year-old chairman of the board of Eaton's of Canada Ltd. was carried out of the central-Toronto home by the intruder but he was stopped by police just outside.

Signy ran back into the house when the man was distracted by police.

The First Bug—Dating from 1907

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Nick Harris detective agency has pinpointed a key moment in the making of the modern U.S. — the development of the first "bug" to surreptitiously eavesdrop on conversations.

And the sleuths know just who used it, too — "our legendary founder, Nick Harris himself."

It was in 1907, said the current head of the agency, Nick Speriglio, and the crude early bug is on its way to the Smithsonian Institution to stand with Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis and other mementoes of America's development.

"This raises the possibility of Watergate-type incidents back to the administration of Teddy Roosevelt," said Speriglio.

Sperilglio said he would display the "1907 bug" at a news conference today.

"It's just a coincidence that we scheduled the press conference on the fourth anniversary of Watergate — honest," he insisted.

The listening device was made for Harris in 1907 by the Dictagraph Co., he said.

It is the size of a large suitcase, "compared to a modern bug, about the size of child's tooth."

"At the time, Harris used it only while working for law enforncement agencies. They would hire him because they had no bugging equipment of their own."

In 1920, the device helped bring to justice James Watson, dubbed "the modern bluebeard" by Los Angeles newspapers of the day, on charges of marrying and murdering 16 women.

"Harris was hired by one of the wives who wondered why her husband was home so rarely," Speriglio said.

"Tailing him, he found out Watson was a bigamist, with many wives, and with the dictagraph he overheard Watson bragging to a friend about the murders — it was the key break in the case."

A Cancer Secret During Billionaire's Last Days

LONDON — J. Paul Getty contracted cancer during the last months of his life, his personal physician said today. Dr. Clive MacKenzie said prostate cancer was diagnosed two months ago in the oil billionaire who died June 6 at age 83. "Mr. Getty knew he had cancer," he said. "I discussed it with him and he took it very well. He was one of the few people I'd tell outright.'' MacKenzie said Getty's last illness thwarted his wish to return to the United states before he died.

PEKING — There is more than one mystery about this week's developments in Peking. At his farewell banquet Monday evening Madagascar President Didier Ratsiraka omitted the customary toast to the health of Mao Tse-tung in the text of his speech. Since visiting leaders normally give a copy of their banquet speeches to the Chinese in advance and since the Chinese are extremely conscious of protocol matters foreigners were both intrigued and mystified by the omission.

LUANDA—Stewart Tendler, a correspondent for the London Times, was ordered out of Angola on Wednesday after a story appeared in the newspaper which angered Angolan officials. The story, not written by Tendler, said Cubans controlled Angolan President Agostinho Neto.

LONDON — Home Secretary Roy Jenkins said Wednesday there will be no curbs on immigratin despite racial tensions and the demands of anti-immigration right-wingers.

LAS VEGAS — William Peter Blatty, author of The Exorcist, filed a $1.5 million suit in federal court Wednesday against Edward and Fred Doumani, directors of Tropicana Hotel Corp. The suit said the Doumani's corporation filed to deliver stock certificaes after Blatty invested $500,000 in 1974.

WASHINGTON — Hope Cooke Namgyal, former New York Socialite who renounced her U.S. citizenship to marry the crown prince of Sikkim, now has permanent residence status here. After the prince was overthrown by pro-Indian legislators and placed under house arrest, she returned to the United States with her two children. She is seeking full restoration of her citizenship, but that request faces opposition in Congress.

NASHVILLE — Singer Tammy Wynette, whose recordings include Stand By Your Man and D-I-V-O-R-C-E, is getting married next month for the third time. Miss Wynette, 34, who divorced singer George Jones 15 months ago, announced Wednesday she will marry real estate executive John Tomlin, 31, whom she met while dining with friends a year ago.

BARNESVILLE, Ohil — A "bedraggled" but improving Wayne Hays is "coming along pretty good" and may return to his rural Ohio home this weekend, according to a Barnesville hospital spokesman. The Ohio Democrat, involved in a Washington sex scandal, was hospitalized a week ago for an overdose of sleeping pills "He's still confined to bed, but he is eating well and is on a regular diet," said the spokesman.

The Raven plays a profoundly important role in the religious and mythical tales of the West Coast Indians. His vocal capacity is extraordinary, and he can produce a whole range of sounds, from the guttural tones (which bear an uncanny resemblance to some of the native languages of the northern B.C. coast) to single wonderful sighing sounds which cause the wanderer in the deep woods to pause in astonishment and look high into the dark trees for the spirit voice of the forest . . .

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In today's deal we have a recurring type of situation, namely, which way to finesse for a queen. In this deal, as in most analgous ones, observation can eliminate the guesswork. The hand came up in a rubber-bridge game.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
3 ♡	Dbl.	Pass	4 NT
Pass	5 ♡	Pass	6 ♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡.

South came up with an inspired conclusion when he decided that West's pre-emptive opening bid was designed to keep North-South out of their rightful heritage, a slam. So, without any delay, he went full steam ahead to a small slam in spades.

After cashing the heart king, West continued with the ace of hearts, which South ruffed. Three rounds of trumps were then drawn, ending up in dummy. The board's remaining heart was then ruffed by South, East discarding the deuce of clubs. The ace, queen and king of diamonds were taken next, after which declarer paused and reflected on what he had learned to date.

Since East had failed to follow suit to the third heart lead, West was known to have started with seven hearts (admittedly, West figured to have seven hearts from the word "go," based on his vulnerable three-heart opening bid, but it's always nice to have factual confirmation of a feeling or hunch).

West had also followed suit to three trump leads. And he was also known to have been dealt exactly two diamonds, since he had failed to follow suit to the third diamond lead. Thus West's hand had become an open book: seven hearts, three spades, two diamonds, and one club.

The three of clubs was now led, West following suit with the five-spot. All of West's cards were now known to declarer — and the queen of clubs was not one of them. Hence East had to be the possessor of the club queen.

So declarer won the club lead with the board's ace, after which he returned the six of clubs and finessed his nine-spot successfully. The slam contract was now there for the taking, accomplished through that line of play known as "counting out a hand."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Friday, June 18, 1976

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Avoid direct confrontation. Go around corners rather than run into brick wall. Message should become increasingly clear. Gemini, Sagittarius could figure prominently. You are in position to strike pay dirt.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Sensuality is highlighted. Your disires can be fulfilled. What seemed out-of-reach is closer than you might imagine. A payments program can be arranged. You're going to be happier and more secure in financial sense.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Some of your best qualities surge to forefront. You know what you should do, but there are blocks to progress. Key is to be analytical, observant and to get promises and ideas in writing. Virgo is in picture.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Check home conditions, family plans. Strive for harmony. Long-range views, programs are more important than you might currently perceive. Taurus, Libra figure in picture. Publishing, advertising programs should be spotlighted.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Dig for information based on factual data. Ignore rumor, intimidation, subtle hints, whispers. Stick with what is solid. Money as it affects partner or mate comes into picture. You're asked to produce receipts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Emphasis on agreement, commitment, ability to hurdle obstacle. What seems opposition is merely a healthy challenge. Maintain sense of fitness and humor. Capricorn, Cancer could figure prominently. Older individual will give you benefit of any doubt.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Finish rather than begin project. Reach beyond apparent limitation. You have chance now to improve produce, display and distribution. Aries and another Libra could be part of scenario. Relative is sincere but doesn't have facts at hand.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Money flow improves. You're rewarded financially — and emotionally, too. Member of opposite sex aids in elevating your self-esteem. Specifically, you instigate an important change and this results in surprise benefits.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may be seeing through a prism. Means you're perceiving figures in dream-like sequence. Know it and give yourself time to evaluate situation. Get emotional breather. Listen to words of one who helped sustain you during recent time of crisis.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Highlight ability to be versatile. Avoid disputes. Show that you can laugh at your own foibles. Indeed, humor can now become a major ally. Short trip is on agenda. Yo umay be in "celebrating" mood. Remember diet resolutions!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Money matters should be dealt with in conservative manner. Means take no unnecessary risks with possessions, valuables or cash. Count your change, too! If specific — and if you familiarize yourself with details — you land on your feet.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Lunar cycle is such that you can make new contacts, start project, display creative abilities. Promotion, elevation of prestige is due. Member of opposite sex pays meaningful compliment — and means it. Change, travel and variety are featured.

IF JUNE 18th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are versatile, creative, a natural teacher, actor, lawyer. Travel, write, express views in provocative manner. Aries, Libra persons play important roles in your life. June should be your most significant month of 1976, a year during which you love, feel more secure and obtain property.

Despite Rain, Get Out the Hose

From conversations with local gardeners having plant problems it appears that a lot of Victoria residents are depending on weather reports from Vancouver and forgetting their gardens are in Victoria.

Some can quote me the amount of rain that fell yesterday "according to TV" without realizing that not one raindrop fell on any local garden.

As a result they have allowed their soils to dry out and the plants are surviving solely because skies have been overcast or cloudy. It takes but one day of bright sunshine and moderate wind to reveal the true condition of the soil.

The 7.6mm. which fell Tuesday was enought to wash the dust off the leaves and give a superficial moistness to the garden, but an inch or so down, the ground was unaffected.

According to official readings at the Victoria-Tillicum observation station, located at Trans-Canada and Tillicum Road, only 4.6 mm. of rain were recorded in the first 13 days of June, and a few raindrops, insufficient to measure, on two days.

The heaviest rainfall was on the night of June 9 when 2.8 mm. were recorded. This was apparently limited to a narrow band only a few miles wide, since the Airport (Sidney) had only one-half mm. in the same period and Gonzales Observatory an unmeasurable trace.

Yet Vancouver reports tell us the Habitat Conference was "completely rained out, with the sun appearing briefly on two days."

The reason for these vast differences is the topography of the terrain. Moisture laden clouds reach this island from the Pacific at low level and their movement is obstructed by the hills and mountains that form the backbone of the island.

They cannot cross these ridges until sufficient moisture has been dropped to allow the clouds to rise to a higher level. This accounts for the heavy rainfall on the western coast, and one station having the heaviest rainfall in Canada.

As the clouds pass over Victoria they are comparatively dry, giving cloudy to overcast conditions and the odd raindrop. The only areas receiving a good shower are those located east of a break in the hills, which accounts for the differences recorded on June 9.

Proceeding across the various straits between the island and mainland, moisture is again picked up, but it is dropped as soon as further progress is blocked by high ground.

This happens when the clouds are impeded by the North-shore mountains, making the city of Vancouver another area of heavy rainfall. These conditions are given full publicity on Vancouver TV, but do not, in any way, represent conditions in Victoria.

The advice that local gardens should be watered at regular intervals from approximately mid-April is not an effort to swell the coffers of the Water Board; it is an effort to avoid plant problems in the dry months ahead.

Statistics show that one-inch of water (25.4mms), or nearly five imp. gallons to each sq. yd., is required every 10 days to keep our plants in good condition. That is 3 ins. a month or 76 mms.

While this information is important to the successful culture of plants on southern Vancouver Island, how can the average gardener know when the correct amount has been applied?

The answer is simple. The amount stated is needed to maintain adequate moisture at root level 12 to 14 inches below the surface. All the gardener has to do is dig small holes 12 inches deep and see if the soil at the depth is moist enough.

If you do this among plants near foundations, and in open beds, you will find the reason for wilting, and drying or falling foliage.

And it may help to tune in the local weather reports daily on CFAX around 12:10 and CJVI near 12:25 each noonhour. These contain the facts about our local weather.

Conservation Priority Push

Times news Services

VANCOUVER — Conservation should be given equal priority with exploration, the B.C. Energy Commission recommended Wednesday. In a 15-year economic outlook, the commission put itself into a nose-to-nose confrontation with B.C. Hydro.

As well as urging removal of levies which encourage greater use of hydro, the commission took issue with Hydro's estimated growth needs in the period to 1991.

These will be between 5.1 and 5.4 per cent a year; not the 9.2 per cent figure being claimed by Hydro, the commission said.

The commission report also took issue with the accepted practice of building generating facilities in advance of demand and then pricing to encourage greater consumption.

"Average costs of electrical supply are no longer falling; they are increasing at alarmingly high rates and imposing substantially higher costs on a public now also agitated about the irreversible damage to social and natural environments associated with major generation projects," the report stated.

Among other major findings of the commission were:

- B.C.'s dependence on external sources of oil will continue to increase and could become total early next century.
- Natural gas supply will be more than adequate to fulfill domestic requirements beyond the forecast period, but at no time will there be sufficient gas to meet fully volumes under the present export license.
- Coal is becoming increasingly attractive to industrial users but will not have significant impact until near or after the end of the forecast period.

The commission, in making conservation a high-priority recommendation, said these specific measures require prompt action:

- Assessment of the federal energy conservation program and the implementation of a complementary program provincially.
- Adoption of a conservation-oriented building code for homes and commercial buildings.
- Development of a program of financial assistance to homeowners wanting to make improvements which would cut energy consumption.

No Fringe Benefit Boost—City

The city of Victoria said Thursday it could not agree to raising fringe benefits for firefighters without being unfair to other civic employees bound by anti-inflation restraints.

An arbitration hearing before chairman John Davie to reach a binding settlement for a 1976 contract was told the city would apply the maximum increase allowable under federal price and wage controls entirely to salaries in order to be equitable.

"An award that makes any concessions to the union's proposals on benefits will merely erode the maximum allowable through distribution to smaller groups within the bargaining unit. Such an erosion is unfair and highly discriminatory . . ," said city negotiator Carl Anselm.

The city's firemen, represented by Local 17 of International Association of Firefighters, contends the anti-inflation guidelines do not apply because there is no federal-provincial agreement. The union seeks a one-year contract and an 8 per cent wage increase to bring parity with the majority of B.C. firefighters, or $1,323 a month for men with five years service.

Anselm said the city will pay a 7.3 per cent increase this year and 7.1 per cent next year in a two-year contract to raise a fifth-year firefighter to $1,384 a month in 1976 and $1,482 in 1977 from the current $1,290 a month.

These increases would raise the training officer and chief fire prevention officer to $1,885 next year, and assistant chiefs to $2,005 in the same period.

Anselm said the existing $25 a month for men holding first aid certificates would rise by $1.83 a month this year and $1.90 next year.

He compared the city's proposal with the average annual income for Victoria of $8,674 in 1974.

"All citizens, from every walk of life have a heavy moral responsibility to work together with every level of government, federal, provincial and municipal, to bring under control the escalating inflation that has plagued this country for the past four or five years," Anselm said.

He noted that the guidelines introduced by the federal government last October are "applicable to everybody," and that arbitration awards rendered after last Oct. 13 are also subject to controls.

A bill endorsing the federal guidelines has been passed and given royal assent in B.C., Anselm said, and active negotiations with the federal government are authorized.

Davie agreed with the union, however, that he is not yet bound by any anti-inflation agreement.

The total cost of keeping 100 city firemen in 1975 amounted to slightly more than $2 million, or $20,080 per firefighter, Anselm said.

In the period Jan. 1, 1973 to Dec. 3, 1975, firemen received salary increases of 37.5 to 40.3 per cent, while the consumer price index for the shorter period of Januard 1973 to January 1975 rose 22.2 per cent, the city's spokesman said.

Davie pointed out that consumer prices in B.C. rose higher than elsewhere and expressed disappointment that Anselm's figures did not reflect this nor the increase in national productivity.

Anselm said the firefighter's contract is superior to other civic employees' agreements in the area of fringes, including a premium for drivers, longer vacations and better pensions, sick leave and funeral leave provisions.

He wondered if the union was prepared to give up such benefits in exchange for wage parity.

"The city of Victoria feels very strongly that no justification whatsoever exists for the taxpayers of Victoria to provide the best of all worlds, as is being proposed by the union," Anselm said.

Although the city is proud of its firemen, it feels they are well rewarded for their services, Anselm told the arbitrator.

"The firefighters employed by the city of Victoria are in a unique and preferred position in that they do not have to contend with many . . . of the extenuating and hazardous conditions and circumstances that face their colleagues in most other cities and areas."

Anselm cited security of employment, lack of extremes in climate and the absence of congested industrial, slum and skyscraper conditions. It is also unknown here for firemern to assist police in riot control, as has been done in eastern Canada and other areas.

He noted a low accident rate and only two on-the-job deaths in 37 years—one from a fall in a training drill at the firehall and one from a heart attack at a fire. Anselm refuted a union claim that firemen have more accidents than workers generally.

Earlier, Dr. Hugh Keenleyside, author of Firefighting in British Columbia, a report for the attorney-general, supported firemen's claims for parity and said that, generally, firemen face greater hazards than policemen.

Anselm asked deputy fire chief Carl Coates about the last time additional men were hired by the department, in 1966. He said he recalled that 10 men were needed to maintain strength of on-duty shifts when the city assumed responsibility for ambulance service.

"Does the chief want the most efficient fire department," Anselm asked.

"I think he's already got it," said union counsel Dermod Owen-Flood as a gallery of off-duty firemen applauded.

Anselm repeated his question: "Does the chief want the best, most efficient department in B.C.?"

"Yes," Coates replied.

"He'd be a damn poor chief if he didn't," Anselm said.

Standard Furniture Business Being Sold to New Partnership

Derek Denny announced today he will be one of three partners to take over ownership of Standard Furniture, 737 Yates, effectuve July 1.

The other two partners will be store manager Hugh Kelso and John Rowand of Victoria. Kelso will continue as general manager and Denny will continue a merchandising manager.

Standard Furniture was founded 63 years ago by Arthur Denny. The store opened on Pandora and made several moves before settling at its Yates location.

When the founder retired, ownership passed to his three children, the father, uncle and aunt of Derek Denny. Father Roy Denny, uncle Tom Denny and aunt Eleanor Steaner will continue to own the building but have sold the furniture business to the new partnership.

There will be no change in staff or store policy as a result of the sale, Derek Denny said.

He noted that he had been an employee at the store for 12 years while a partner, Kelso, had been employed there for 20 years.

The sale will also put to rest a number of rumors about offers from the business from Wosk's Ltd. and other companies. Sale of the business had been discussed for some time but there was never any offer from Wosk's, Denny said.

A decision was made that the business should remain in the family, at least in partnership form, and that the present management should continue, Denny said.

CHEAP JEEP CHIRP WAS JUST A BUZZ

WASHINGTON (WP) — Lured by tales of an amazing bargain that travelled by word of mouth from New Orleans to Waldorf, Md., to Alexandria, Va., more than 4,000 Washington area residents signed up in recent days to buy brand new government-surplus Jeeps for just $100 each.

Depending on which story the eager prospective buyer had heard, the vehicles were either sitting in crates somewhere in Bayonne, N.J., or due to arrive in Mobile, Ala., sometime in August or September. They might be without tires, batteries or motor oil, but otherwise they were supposed to be in mint condition — and thus an unbelievably good buy at $100 a Jeep.

Government officials insist there are no such surplus Jeeps. Investigators, including FBI agents, who were called into find out what was going on, have concluded it was nothing but a hoax blown up by rumors that got out of hand.

Both Sides Appeal Fatal Shot Sentence

VANCOUVER (CP) — Both Crown and defence have filed appeals in the case of a man who was given a suspended sentence in the fatal shooting of a burglar.

In appeal notices filed in the British Columbia Court of Appeal registry, Crown counsel F. A. Melvin claims the sentence imposed on Ivo Srdanovic, 41, was a "grossly inadequate" sentence in light of the circumstances of the offence and the accused.

Melvin also claims the trial judge Mr. Justice D. R. Verchere did not give sufficient consideration to the question of the deterrent. The Crown appeal is expected to be heard Sept. 8.

Srdanovic originally was charged with murdering Danny Mazurski, 21, who was felled by a shotgun blast in Srdanovic's central Vancouver home Dec. 18, 1974.

The Crown alleged that Mazurski's shooting was deliberate and that Srdanovic, whose suite had been burgled once previously, lay in wait with a shotgun and two pistols, expecting the burglar to return.

The defence claimed that Srdanovic fired the gun out of fear when he saw a figure approaching him.

The supreme court jury convicted Srdanovic on the reduced charge of manslaughter and recommended extreme mercy.

Mr. Justice Verchere followed the jury's recommendation and said there would be no useful purpose in jailing Srdanovic.

Srdanovic has filed notice of appeal against his conviction with his lawyer, J. O. Richardson, claiming that the judge misdirected the jury by telling them that in order for the claim of self-defence to be available to Srdanovic they must find that the intruder assaulted him.

It Might Sound Difficult

BANGOR, Maine (UPI) — A 30-year-old old local man has lost his teeth and his glasses and maybe his pride, but he won't have to go to jail for it.

The man stood before Judge Davis Clark Wednesday on a charge of assault and battery on a woman.

When asked how he pleaded to the charge, he replied both he and the woman wanted it dismissed.

"Well that's no plea," the judge said, "and she isn't here to withdraw the complaint."

"Then I'll plead nolo," the defendant said and launched into an account of what happened.

"My girl friend and I had been drinking and we started fighting," he said.

"She took my teeth away and took my glasses and broke them and I backhanded her."

"You mean," the judge asked, "she took your eating away and your sight away and left you with nothing but your hearing"

"But we're getting married."

"When did you decide this?"

"Well, she's pregnant," the man replied.

"Dismissed and good luck," the judge said.

Planes Collide

BONN (Reuter)—Two West German Air Force Starfighter planes collided over Bavaria on Wednesday but neither pilot was hurt, the defence ministry said. One of the pilots abandoned his aircraft and parachuted to safety while the other landed his plane at a nearby airfield.

BETWEEN FRIENDS' SESSION

Trudeau Assures Ford on NATO

Ford and Trudeau . . . between friends

By PAUL WHITELAW
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Prime Minister Trudeau, attempting to relieve U.S. anxiety over Canada's commitment to maintain its NATO role, reassured President Ford Wednesday night that his government will bly new long-range patrol aircraft.

Trudeau, speaking to reporters after a "working dinner" aboard the presidential yacht Sequoia, said Ford wanted to know: "Were we still committed to a NATO role in the area of submarine warfare?"

The prime minister said he "made it quite clear" that cancellation of the deal to buy the aircraft from Lockheed had not resulted from "any change of policy" by Canada.

He explained that the decision resulted fron the inability to arrange financing for the financially-troubled American company, he said.

* * *

The discussion between the two leaders followed the revelation Wednesday that Ford wrote to the prime minister about two weeks ago expressing his concern about the breakdown of the Lockheed deal.

The prime minister said he flew to Washington because he and Ford wanted to "not only know each other better, but know the major unstated premises of each others' administration.

"The president and I more or less agreed when we last talked that we would try to get together on an informal basis . . ."

* * *

Asked whether the president had mentioned that he had met the previous day with Canadian Opposition leader Joe Clark, Trudeau replied: "He did not, nor did he ask me if I was meeting with Jimmy Carter, which I'm not."

The prime minister noted, however, that he hoped Ford thought well of Clark because "he's a good leader of the opposition and I hope he will remain leader of the opposition for a long time."

When he arrived at the White House, Trudeau presented the president with the book "Entre Amis — Between Friends."

A 'SOLAR COMMUNITY' EYED IN WASH. TOWN

SOAP LAKE, Wash. (AP) — A giant plastic dome over this city of 1,400 with small solar-powered "utility districts" from blocks of four or five houses could help solve energy problems here, says a local solar energy advocate.

Mayor Dale Vickrey said Wednesday most Soap Lake citizens support the idea.

"Solar energy very soon will be used everywhere because in the next few years we'll be short of fossil fuels," Vickrey said.

The Same Time, Same Place . . .

United Press International

President Ford and Ronald Reagan, for the first time in the current U.S. presidential campaign, plan to be in the same roon at the same time.

Both Republican candidates will address a dinner in Des Moines, Friday night.

Sen. Henry Jackson formally endorsed Carter as "the strongest possible candidate" and urged his 232 delegates to support the Georgian on the first ballot.

Those Jackson delegates are not among the 1,535 already counted in Carter's column — now 30 more than the number needed for the Democratic nomination.

California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., who has refused to concede the nomination to Carter, meanwhile, announced the purchase of 30 minutes of network time from NBC-TV June 25.

There was no indication what Brown would say. A spokesman said Brown had "no current plans to endorse Carter."

PRIVATE TV SUBSIDIES?

OTTAWA (CP) — The government may have to pay direct subsidies to private television unless the flow of Canadian advertising money to U.S. border television stations is stopped, Harry Boyle, chairman of the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, said Wednesday.

Boyle told the Senate banking committee that subsidies appear to be the only alternative if border broadcasters continue to drain about $20 million a year in "desperately needed" Canadian advertising revenues.

Legislation before the committee to bar domestic advertisers from claiming tax deductions for spending on U.S. outlets would rescue private television system like the CTV Television Network from financial problems, he said.

The banking committee is in the final stages of a long review of the legislation and is expected to propose major amendments before the bill goes back to the full Senate within the next week.

The committee is almost unanimously opposed to the bill which would also bar tax deductions for advertising in foreign-owned magazines like Time and Reader's Digest.

The senators are expected to propose delays in implementation of the bill and lower editorial content requirements for magazines to qualify as Canadian.

Boyle said he was tired of seeing Canada portrayed as the antagonist in the border broadcasting disputes.

U.S. stations drain about 10 per cent of all television advertising revenues from the country and "have managed to enrich themselves without any legal right to do so."

200,000 Jobs in Danger Commons Warned

OTTAWA (CP) — An indeffective federal textile policy and failure to protect domestic producers against low-cost foreign imports might lead to total collapse of the 200,000-job industry, opposition MPs said Wednesday.

Heward Grafftey (PC-Brome-Missisquoi) and Flora Mac Donald (PC-Kingston and the Islands), both of whom have testile plants in their ridings, said in the Commons Canadian producers are losing ground to imports.

Industry Minister Don Jamieson, while acknowledging there are major problems in the depressed industry, said a recovery was under way.

Grafftey said he believed that if immediate action is not taken, the textile industry will disappear.

Government officials and cabinet minsters believed the industry was expendible, he said.

But with failure of the domestic industry production, consumers would have to pay more for imported products in future.

Now, he said, imports account for 54 per cent of the domestic consumption.

Miss MacDonald said Canadian industry contributed $5 billion a year to the economy but present conditions were leading to layoffs of workers and loss of investment to the United States where there was better protection.

"We're talking about an industry which is in danger of being phased out by default . . . because the government has failed to take action to implement a textile policy," she said.

Miss MacDonald said productivity in the textile industry over the last decade has exceeded the average for other manufacturing industries.

Canadian Film Makers Press Showing Quota

OTTAWA (FP) — The Council of Canadian Film Makers yesterday made an eight point pitch to the federal government to bolster Canada's feature film industry.

Representatives of three major political parties supported a presentation of a petition in Parliament calling for an official 10-year film policy.

The petition called for reconsideration of the definition of Canadian films, increased incentives for Canadian investment and production, and encouragement of Canadian control of distribution and exhibition companies.

It urged that the CBC and National Film Board be encouraged to increase co-production with, and the number of films commissioned for, the private sector; and that Air Canada be encouraged to show "a reasonable number" of Canadian feature films on movie flights.

The filmmakers also asked for a federal-provincial conference to provide for legislated quota and levies for Canadan film showings.

The petition argued that there are major economic and cultural benefits available fpr Canada through a stronger film industry.

He pledged Progressive Conservative support for a Canadian film industry, but warned that he does ot approve of quotas and that in the long run the ultimate test for the Canadian film industry must be "the quality and excellence of its own productions."

COPYRIGHT ROW

OTTAWA (FP) — Senator Eugene Forsey has accused the government of violating the Copyright Act.

He demanded to know in the Senate who had been responsible for replacing in the Economic Review published in April this year the customary and legal 'Crown Copyright reserved."

That was deleted and in its place were the words:

"Copyright minister of supply and services."

Sen. Forsey asked "By what authority was this change, which appears to be a plain violation of Section 11 of the copyright act made?"

He asked "Has the minister of supply and services Jean Pierre Goyer been created a corporation sole?"

"That is 's-o-l-e,' I may observe in passing," the senator told the Upper House.

Government house leader in the Senate Senator Ray Perrault said he was not able to provide an answer at the time.

Tough Times Forecast

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — Under increasing pressure from reformers and federal investigators concerned about corruption, Teamsters president Frank Fitzsimmons says there will be "difficult times ahead" for the biggest union in the U.S.

That was Fitzsimmons' observation Wednesday after Teamster conventioneers elected him to another five-year term and allowed him to tighten his grasp on the resources of the two-million-member union.

He told the convention's nearly 2,300 delegates none of these outside pressures would alter the status quo.

'FIGHT OR DIE'

SAN DIEGO (WP) — A drill instructor warned Pvt. Lynn McClure, who was beaten unconscious in a pugil stick drill here last Dec. 6, that 'if he didn't fight, then he's be killed," a courtmartial court was told here Wednesday.

"He (McClure) said he didn't know how to use a pugil stick, that he didn't want to fight," testified former Marine Richard VanOven at the court-martial of Drill Instructor S.Sgt. Harold Aronon.

Marine Pvt. Robert Perry testified that Bronson warned McClure that if he didn't fight, he would be killed.

McClure — a slightly built 20-year-old from Lufkin, Tex., whom his family has termed mentally handicapped — was also hit as he lay defenseless in the dirt, VanOven testified.

He said Bronson did not always blow the whistle to stop the pugil stick bout as soon as McClure was knocked to the ground by his opponent.

THE DAILY COLONIST AND VICTORIA TIMES

BEFORE THE JUDGE

"It's hard for me to believe" that people along the coast don't know they need a special permit to be on a commercial fishing vessel when it's on the job, Judge William Ostler said Wednesday in Victoria provincial court.

"A lot of them don't," replied Ross William McDonald, 20, of 3020 Lansdowne, but the judge indicated he believed the opposite as he imposed a $20 fine.

McDonald pleaded guilty to a B.C. Fishing Regulations charge of being aboard the fishboat Kitimat II in Hecate Strait May 8 while it was being used for commercial fishing and he didn't have a commercial fishing permit.

He said he had only hitched a ride down the coast on the ship, wasn't being paid and was "just working (in the galley) for my grub."

A plea of not guilty was entered by defence lawyer Mohan Jawl on behalf of two Victoria area residents following the reading of a Landlord and Tenant Act charge. Ostler set the trial for Sept. 30.

John and Shannah Shumka, who were not in court, were charged in one count with increasing rent for a premises at 406 Cook by more than the allowed 10.6 per cent and in the second count with unlawfully giving notice of termination to residents at that address.

Dates were Sept. 1 to Nov. 30, 1975, in the first count and Sept. 1, 1975, to Jan. 31, 1976, in the second. It was only the second time such a charge had been read in the Victoria court.

Ronald Glen Westad, 33, who asked Ostler June 2 if he could go back to an Alberta jail rather than "just sitting out at Wilkinson Road," got part of his wish after the judge approved a request by defence spokesman Douglas Macfarlane.

The request was that Westad be remanded straight through to a Victoria escaping-charge hearing Sept. 20 and a Duncan trial Sept. 22 rather than stay at Wilkinson Road and appear weekly in Victoria court.

Macfarlane said this would allow transfer to Westad to an institution on the B.C. Lower Mainland for medical treatment. Nature of the treatment was not disclosed.

Bail was refused in two separate cases before Ostler as detention was ordered for David Kurt Brauner, 25, of 831 Walker, and Ottawa area resident Joel Thomas Pinkus, 18.

Pinkus was charged Tuesday with theft June 10 of 51 pairs of jeans from a Saanich clothing store and possession of the jeans June 12 in Victoria, knowing they were stolen.

Marc Harvey Moran, 26, the Vancouver resident who was released on the least stringent form of bail when a judge found out where he worked, had his trial on a two-count Victoria charge of theft of purses and contents May 27 set by Ostler for Sept. 29.

When Moran was charged May 28, Judge Blake Allan released him on an undertaking to return on all future court dates in the case. He did so after he learned Moran worked in the Vancouver police station kitchen and said, "He shouldn't be hard to find."

Rodney Thomas McQuarrie, 18, no fixed address, was found guilty by Ostler following a trial on a Victoria charge of taking a purse and its contents, including $57 cash, June 1 from Tiffany's discotheque at the Empress. Ostler decided on a penalty of 18 months probation.

June 24 was set by Ostler as the trial date of Oguz Sapmaz, 22, of 1921 Fernwood. He pleaded not guilty to a Victoria charge of mischief earlier that day of kicking a chunk out of one of the two main glass doors at the Victoria police station.

Two $500 fines led the drink-drive list Wednesday in traffic court. They were assessed against Ted Charles Verigin, 26, of 2840 Henderson, who pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of impaired driving June 5, and Scott Alexander Kent, 25, of 171 Estelline, found guilty after a trial on a Saanich charge of driving April 11 with a blood-alcohol reading of more than .08 per cent.

Fined $450 each for impaired driving were Morris Frederick Hamilton, 58, of 3126 Irma, stopped May 29 in Victoria; Douglas Norman Neely, 21, of 6171 Kirby, Saturday in Colwood, and Stephen Donald Hickling, 31, of Cloverdale, B.C., Feb. 1 in Sidney. Fined $400 each were John Charles Henry, 31, of 4590 Bailey, for driving "over .08" May 21 in Sidney, and John Edward Kuyten, 25, of 905 Mary, for impaired driving June 6 in Saanich.

Conjugal Visits Allowed—But Only at Home

The 50-year-old Texada Island man who wept last week in Victoria provincial court when he asked in vain for conjugal visits with his 24-year-old wife is going to go home — provided two people put up a total surety bail of $50,000.

Judge William Ostler approved release of George Arthur Falkner on bail of $50,000 "with one of two sufficient sureties" on a charge of conspiracy to import and traffic in marijuana.

Falkner and five other persons, inlcuding his wife Beth Ann Baker, were originally charged with importing narcotics which were seized in Surrey in mid-April. The two-count conspiracy charge was laid later and the prosecution said it would proceed on this second charge.

The court had ordered detention for Falkner and Robert Archibald Brook, 24, of West Vancouver, sureties of $20,000 each for two other men and release of Baker and another woman on their own recognizance in $5,000 each.

But acting prosecutor Nicholas Lott said Wednesday a Vancouver county court judge had quashed Falkner's detention order on the importing charge and set bail at $50,000 with two sureties.

He told Ostler that prosecutor Cecil Branson of Victoria and defence lawyer Tom Rafael of Vancouver had agreed the same $50,000 could cover the conspiracy charge provided approval was granted by Ostler, who had ordered Falkner's detention in that case. The judge did.

One week before, Falkner had pleaded with Ostler during a routine weekly remand appearance to order conjugal visits, which he said had been rejected by Wilkinson Road jail authorities because they were against corrections department policy.

Falkner wept as he said his dentention until the scheduled three-week preliminary hearing in October and November, plus a possible later trial in a higher court, could place his eight-year "warm, loving relationship with my wife . . . in serious jeopardy."

"It's difficult enough to be deprived of my craft and my ability to support my wife, let alone languish abjectly in jail, without being denied the human right of the simple pleasure of making love to my wife," he said.

Ostler said conjugal visits to prisoners were allowed in some countries but not Canada, where they were "entirely a matter for the correctional authoritits."

Wednesday, he ordered another weekly remand for Falkner pending any release on bail and took the same action for Brock, who has been unable to win a higher-court reversal of his detention.

NDP CHARGES CONFLICT

Lau Admits Seeing Mining Bill Draft

FORMER Socred forests minister Ray Williston, as expected, was appointed B.C. Cellulose Co. president by Premier Bill Bennett Wednesday. He will operate separately from Forests Minister Tom Waterland, who also said Wednesday logging may be allowed in parks in an effort to boost employment. See stories on Page 3.

By LIZ HUGHES

Times Staff

The NDP Wednesday demanded the resignation of Mines Minister Tom Waterland, charging that a director of a B.C. mining company helped draft the Socred's mining legislation.

NDP MLA Gary Lauk (Vancouver Centre) charged that Jurgen Lau, a Vancouver lawyer and director of Barrier Reef Resources Ltd. helped draft the Mineral Resource Tax Act and that Lau saw a draft of the legislation before it was presented in the legislature.

The act, introduced June 5, would repeal the controversial royalties placed on ore production during the NDP administration and impose instead a tax on only the profits of mining companies.

Lau, in a telephone interview from Vancouver, admitted he had seen a draft of the bill before it was intrduced.

"Of course I saw a draft of Bill 57. I helped in drafting the legislation,'" Lau said.

But, he said, as a mining solicitor he had also seen the NDP's Mineral Royalties Act before it was introduced.

He called the conflict of interest charge made by Lauk "utter nonsense."

The demand for Waterland's resignation came towards the end of two hours of acrimonious debate.

Waterland refused during that time to answer at least 40 opposition queries on whether Lau had attended a meeting May 13 during which the draft of the legislation was discussed.

Lauk finally produced a signed statment by a mines department solicitor who attended the May 13 meeting, saying that Lau had also been there.

When asked by NDP leader Dave Barrett why he had not answered the questions, Waterland said: "I chose not to."

Waterland sat quietly, flanked by two department officials, during most of the NDP charges.

He said finally that he had not known the May 13 meeting took place and said outside the house later he didn't know if it was proper or not.

The minister defended Lau, saying he was a professional person whose personal ethics would preclude him from using his knowledge of the upcoming legislation for his own or his company's personal gain.

"It is only a conflict of interest if he uses it to his personal gain," Waterland said.

Lauk said the new mineral legislation will "line the pockets of the mining presidents . . . with funds which properly should go into the provincial treasury."

He said he doubted that Lau was in on the drafting of the NDP's Mineral Royalties Act, but said if he was, it was a different case because the NDP legislation imposed harsher taxes on the mining industry and the Socred legislation could be used to its advantage.

Lauk said Lau's conflict of interest was heightened because one of his fellow directors on Barrier Reef Resources is B. J. Reynolds, executive vice-president of Bethlehem Copper, one of the largest of B.C.'s mining companies. Reynolds is the son of Patrick Reynolds, Bethlehem's president.

"If Mr. Reynmolds had even the tiniest chat with fellow director Lau about the work he was doing for the minister . . . he had every

CONSUMER BACKED BY COURT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Judge J. G. Ruttan of the B.C. Supreme Court ruled wednesday that the province's Trade and Practices Act gives rights to consumers that over-rule a signed contract stipulating no guarantees or warranties.,

Judge Ruttan in his precedent-setting decision awarded $1,000 to Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Findlay of Chilliwakc, who purchased a car on an "as is — where is" basis, only to have it break down five days later.

[illegible]hael Hanson, director of trade practices, appeared on behalf of the consumer in the appeal against Beywood Motors of Vancouver. The original action was dismissed in small claims court.

Judge Ruttan was told the Findlays bought the 1968-model car Dec. 6, 1974, because they needed reliable transportation for daily trips on the freeway between here and Chilliwack. Five days later the engine blew up and had to be replaced.

They had signed a sales contract that stated, "this vehicle is sold on an as is-where is basis, with no guarantees or warranties of any kind".

Judge Ruttan said in a written decision he was satisfied Findlay could not possibly have contributed to the engine's disintegration and that the sale, during which he was assured the car was in good running order, appeared "as clear case of breach of the seller's fundamental obligation to deliver an article reasonably fit for the buyer's disclosed purposes."

He said the Findlays had intended to have the car checked by their own mechanic, but were dissuaded from doing so because they were told the firm's mechanic had given the car a compression test and passed the motor as fit.

TOP PRIORITY IN ENERGY

VANCOUVER (TNS) — In a 15-year economic outlook published Wednesday, the B.C. Energy Commission said the day of cheap energy is over and stressed that conservation be given a top priority in all future planning of energy needs for the province. (See story Page 44.)

BLOCK BLASTED

Thousands of gallons of gasoline spewing from a ruptured pipeline ignited in West Los Angeles Wednesday turning a busy business block into a blazing inferno.

Four people were killed and more than 20 injured in the blast and resulting blaze which happened after a street-widening crew's excavating machine accidentally pierced apart the buried pipeline feeding a Standard Oil distribution depot at 16,000 gallons a minute under 600 pounds per square inch of pressure.

An automatic alarm cut off the spewing gasoline in two minutes but it took 25 companies of firemen more than an hour to bring the blaze under control, leaving the block little more than a ravaged ruin.

Drug Cases Decrease

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of persons convicted in 1975 of offences concerning marijuana and hashish decreased to 27,367 form 29,067 in the previous year, the federal health department said Wednesday.

In a news release, the department said 25,056 of the 1975 cannabis convictions were related to simple possession of the drug.

The number of known new heroin users also declined in 1975 to 887 compared with 1,261 in 1974, while the number of new concaine users known to the department increased slightly during the same period to 419 from 393.

FRENCH PUSH

TORONTO (CP) — Jean Chretien, federal treasury board president, says it should be compulsory for students entering university to speak both official languages.

Addressing a local Liberal meeting Wednesday night, he stressed that education is a provincial responsibility and it is not for the federal government to impose its will.

"What burns me is why we're not making it compulsory for everyone at university entrance to be bilingual."

Gauthier Going On Carpet

OTTAWA (FP) — Anti-Dumping Tribunal chairman Patrick Gauthier has been recalled from Europe to discuss with Finance Minister Donald Macdonald allegations that the has been carrying on private business activities around the world while holding a senior government position.

Macdonald was in Washington with Prime Minister Trudeau Wednesday, but it was learned that his executive assistant, John McNicholas, interviewed another anti-dumping tribunal member accused of carrying on private business activities while on the government body.

Conservative MP Sinclair Stevens York-Simcoe had produced other documents Tuesday alleging that tribunal member A. L. Bissonnette had been involved in business dealings with Gauthier and international financiers.

Bissonnette denied having any pecuniary interest in business ventures involving Gauthier, and suggested the chairman was only preparing for his retirement from the tribunal at the end of this month. The chairman's original seven years appointment in 1969 was extended for six months in January of this year.

An official of the Anti-Dumping Tribunal said that the chairman was in London when he was recalled by the finance minister.

He said Mr. Gauthier's trip to Europe "was supposed to be partly holiday and partly business."

Enraged Blacks Burn, Loot, Riot

Police surrounded the town and brought in armored cars to crush the worst violence in South Africa in 16 years.

The riots also spread to another black enclave. Police officials said several hundred blacks in Kagiso township 20 miles east of Johannesburg began looting shops and wrecking beer halls late today. A force of some 40 policemen was standing by but took no immediate action.

Police said at least 32 persons had been killed and 250 others injured, 69 of them with bullet wounds, in two days of rioting.

Four whites were stabbed or stoned to death.

The violence was the worst in South Africa since 960 when police killed 69 black rioters in one afternoon in Sharpeville.

In Johannesburg, motorcycle gangs of whites rode into a peaceful protest march by whites and blacks and scattered them with "chains, broken bottles and clubs," according to witnesses.

The march to City Hall by a group of about 1,000 white students of the University of the Witwatersrand and black supporters was to protest the police action in Soweto.

The carried banners saying Your Kids Next.

When the marchers tried to regroup and resume the protest police waded into the peaceful march and dispersed them with baton charges in which an undetermined number were injured and arrested.

Black smoke curled over the area and police said the rioters embarked on a "pillage" of stores and had burned administration offices.

Circling air force helicopters sprayed teargas on the mobs but a strong wind nullified its effect and it failed to quell the arson and looting, police said.

Police said they repulsed one attack by rockthrowing and knife-swinging demonstrators who attempted to storm the Baragwanath Hospital for blacks on the outskirts of Soweto.

Scores of buildings were gutted and at least 40 trucks overturned and burned. Transport services were suspended and police cordoned off the entire area.

South African army units stationed three miles from Soweto were placed on alert. About 1,200 black and white police were inside the enclave trying to restore order.

Whites in suburbs a few miles from Soewto were warned to stay at home.

Postoffices throughout the area were closed and least one was gutted. Bus services which carry thousands of black commuters to Johannesburg daily, were stopped.

Envoy's Killers Held by PLO

BEIRUT (CP) — Palestinian guerrillas and their leftist Lebanese allies announced the arrest today of a number of persons suspected of killing U.S. Ambassador Francis Meloy Jr., his economic counsellor and their Labanese driver.

Meloy, 59, Robert Waring, 58, and Zoheir Maghrabi were shot Wednesday while driving through the no-man's land between the Moslem and Christian sectors of Beirut.

The announcement by the joint Palestinian-leftist Lebanese command did not identify the suspects, say how many there were or give their nationalities. However, it implied they were Arabs and said they will be turned over to the pan-Arab peacekeeping force which the Arab League proposes to send to Lebanon.

In Washington, U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said today the United States will decide "in the next 36 hours" whether to evacuate Americans from Lebanon.

In testimony before the House international relations committee, Kissinger appeared to rule out the possibility the U.S. might intervene militarily in Lebanon as it did in the 1958 crisis with a full scale marine landing.

"We would be facing substantial force requiring significant U.S. force," he said. "Our judgment is that such intervention would unify all elements, except the Christians, against the United States, incur heavy casualties and lead to an open ended commitment," Kissinger said. Kissinger said "no final decision" had yet been made on evacuating Americans from Lebanon or whether to plan a military or non-military evacuation operation.

"If U.S. personnel are used," Kissinger said, "it will be a very short operation. We will of course consult with Congress."

U.S. officials in Washington said they believe the killers are from a Moslem fringe group which hoped to unify squabbling Arab factions by provoking U.S. intervention in the Lebanese civil war.

JUNK MAIL LATE

VANCOUVER (CP)—Some mail heading for Vancouver from eastern Canada is being delayed for at least three days because the post office prefers to sort it out in Winnipeg, Peter Whitaker, postal union local president, said Wednesday.

"Right now (Wednesday afternoon), according to our people in Winnipeg, there are 22 containers of mail in their yards there addressed to Vancouver," Whitaker said.

He said each container carries anywhere from 700 to 1,400 bags of mail, indicating the large amount of Vancouver mail being held up for sorting at Winnipeg.

Whitaker said the delayed mail is mostly third or fourth class and the Winnipeg diversion does not apply to assured or first class mail.

He described it as "business" mail, although householders usually refer to it as "junk" mail, most of it coming from such eastern centres as Montreal and Moncton.

A Vancouver post office spokesman said the mail in question is being sorted in Winnipeg to relieve congestion at Vancouver and to enable the post office to meet its assured and first class mail schedules.

TOP B.C. STUDENT

Subsequent plans may call for an engineering degree at the University of B.C.

Chesshire, 18, was awarded a $250 prize last week for placing first in a provice-wide physics competition organized by the Simon Fraser University physics department on behalf of the Canadian Association of Physicists.

Dr. John Cochran of SFU personally presented the award at Oak Bay's awards ceremonies.

The three-hour special examination was a tough one. The average mark for the 136 students writing it was 37 per cent. Chesshire obtained 85 per cent — 10 per cent more than the runner-up.

Fellow-Oak Bay student, Jeffrey Zelt of 1844 Kings Road, received an honorable mention in the same competition.

Dr. Cochran said the exam was not based on the high school curriculum and students could only answer successfully if they used common sense and if they had done extensive reading outside their assigned texts.

Fish for Weeds in Elk Lake?

By PAUL NICHOLSON

Times Staff

Stocking of a large herbivorous fish is being proposed to control the growth of weeds in Elk-Beaver Lakes.

The fish is the Chinese grass carp, which grows to a length of four feet, with a weight of up to 70 pounds.

Regional district parks and recreation committee will discuss the proposal at its next meeting June 32.

Expensive weed-cutting machines have been used in the past and poisons are currently being considered as operating costs of weed cutters steadily increase.

But the state of Arkansas has solved its weed problem by stocking lakes with this "miracle fish" that can daily eat up to four times its weight in weeds and algae — not an inconsiderable amount since the four-foot adult can weigh up to 70 pounds.

Several years ago 20,000 of the carp, also known as the white amur from the Manchurian river where it has been cultivated for hundreds of years, were released by Arkansas state biologists into a weed-choked, 6,700-acre bog called Lake Conway near Little Rock.

Scientists wanted to make sure the amur's ravenous appetite would spare enough vegetation for resident wildfowl and wouldn't hamper the growth of indigenous sports fish.

"Lake Conway was just one of about 100 lakes in the state that is now totally cleared of submerged weeds since we stocked them with the white amur," Bill Bailey, a biologist with the Arkansas Fish and Wildlife Commission, said in a telephone interview.

Bailey said there had been no significant change in population of other species of fish and that as long as waterfowl

New York

AT NEW YORK the stock market advanced sharply in active trading Thursday, bearing down once again on the 1,000 level in the Dow Jones industrial average.

The Dow average of 30 blue chips was up 11.05 at 999.67 at 2 p.m., and gainers held a 3-to-1 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Dow has crossed 1,000 briefly a half dozen times this year and last closed above that point at 1,001.10 on May 13.

Brokers said there were several favorable influences behind the gains. For one, they noted continuing moves by the federal reserve board that seemed to be aimed at keeping interest rates from rising any further.

In addition, analysts pointed to positive trends that showed up Wednesday in U.S. government reports on housing starts, personal income and industrial production.

NYSE volume reached 17.09 million shares by mid-afternoon, up from 13.89 million at the same point Wednesday.

Montreal

London

AT LONDON mining issues, particulary those of heavyweight South Africa gold producers, were sharply lower in moderate trading on the London stock market Thursday. The Financial Times Index fell 6.5 to 378.5 at mid-session trading. It later rallied and closed at 379.8. Canadian issues eased fractionally. Analysts said the drop in mines was caused by news of civil disturbances in South Africa.

The Smith Boys Can Find It

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Bob and Dave Smith, who founded Urgent Industrial Supply Inc. four years ago, say their theory is that if an item has ever been manufactured, it must be available somewhere.

The company, which began supplying bearings and now finds all kinds of industrial items for companies everywhere in the world, was once asked by Walt Disney Enterprises in California to find a bearing for a children's amusement ride.

The brothers said such requests are almost everyday occurrences now that they have established a reputation for rapid service and delivery.

"We feel ours is the only business of its kind in Canada or the United States," Dave said as he leafed through a large stack of orders, many of them from North America's largest firms.

"'The company called Wednesday and said they wanted 20,000 of these bolts by Friday and we went to work on it," he said. "By Friday, we had 12,000 of the bolts in the plant and they had come from all over North America—we must have had 20 planes in the air carrying bolts."

On another occasion, a company in England asked for a specific kind of bolt. Urgent found it in France and had it shipped to England within hours.

"We don't take no for an answer; we keep trying," Bob said. "Once we were looking for a specific item and phoned Australia to find it."

The idea for the business came up when Dave worked as a purchasing agent for a city hardware supply firm and Bob was with a bearing supply company.

"Dave and I noticed that at least 50 per cent of requests placed through a normal wholesaler couldn't be supplied immediately," Bob said. "There was too much complacency in the business—customers often had to wait a week, two weeks or even a month."

They founded their company with the idea of supplying industrial items and materials as quickly as possible. Now, even if an item is obsolete, the firm will have parts manufactured, Bob said.

Tory Clark Feels Pulse Of Victoria

National Conservative leader Joe Clark came to town Wednesday to shake hands with Victorians and to feel their pulses as well.

He told a noon-hour rally at Centennial Square he was crossing Canada to find out what the local problems are and to listen to possible solutions.

Then he demonstrated his low-keyed approach by wading into the crowd and discussing politics face-to-face for 25 minutes.

Many had personal problems, but some wanted to discuss the big issues.

Clark told one young man that the vote on capital punishment would be very close.

However, he did not have any precise information because he was deliberately not asking other Conservative MPs how they planned to vote.

Any canvass of the MPs by the leader could be construed as an attempt to influence votes and he wanted it to be a completely free vote.

Clark repeated an earlier statement that the would vote against capital punishment, but if it became law he would not hesitate to enforce the law, if he were prime minister.

With other Victorians he debated a wide spectrum of issues, from pensions to aid to small businessmen.

Most people, it turned out, just wanted to shake his hand and talk about social questions, like where they were born and what people they knew in common.

Clark thanked them for their comments and was generally well received.

In a 20-minute speech, Clark gave what amounted to a fireside chat about his trip to visit President Ford on Tuesday and his desire to meet as many Canadians as possible before election day, expected in 1978.

There was no cheering but there were five rounds of applause.

The single heckler was on Clark's side.

When Clark was heaping praise on Victoria MP Allan McKinnon and Saanich MP Don Munro for their work in the House of Commons, a man shouted "they're both wonderful men!" The shout drew one of the louder ovations of the day.

He noted that the most recent Gallup poll showed the Conservatives would get 43 per cent of the vote if an election were held now, 12 percentage points ahead of the Liberals. He added that he was also aware that this gap would probably close near election time.

"One of the problems of the Progressive Conservative Party is that we have been out of office so long that some people think we belong there," he said.

To counter this attitude, he would emphasize a team approach to politics, would offer the Conservatives as an alternative government and he would try to discuss politics with as many Canadians as possible during the next two years.

Instead of doing this in groups, he would do it on an individual basis, he said.

Then he demonstrated his approach to politics by moving into the crowd and answering questions there.

Inevitably he was compared to Trudeau by members of the crowd.

"He has more hair than Pierre," one woman said.

Another complained: "He isn't kissing anybody."

Clark is not a kisser but will shake hands with everybody. The first person he greeted when he entered the square was Colonist reporter Eleanor Boyle, who was startled but pleased to have Clark walk over to her. The last hand he shook was that of one of the half dozen Victoria police constables who were watching Clark proceed through the crowd.

They were hardly needed. Everything was quiet and gentle. It is not clear how Clark's style will go over in the big, roaring cities but it seemed to fit Victoria perfectly, very polite and nobody made too much noise.

I Want Law Degree—McTeer

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Maureen McTeer, exercising a woman's prerogative, has changed her mind and will go back to law school this fall.

"I really want that degree and I now believe that the sooner I get it, the better."

She made the comment in an interview in Victoria Wednesday, accompanying her husband, national Conservative leader Joe Clark.

Her return to law school will be complicated by the birth of their first child a few weeks before classes begin.

"I have interviewed a number of women and I have decided upon a registered nurse who will come in when I am at classes," she said.

"It wasn't the classes I missed that caused me to fail, however," she said.

"The exams were in the morning and they were held after I became pregnant. I wasn't feeling well at all."

She said she is confident that she will pass the examinations next spring after repeating her final year at the University of Ottawa, starting in the fall.

"Everybody is asking me if I want a boy or a girl but all I care is that it is a healthy baby. If it's a boy, Joe will name him. If it's a girl, I'll probably name her.

"I've done some thinking about girls' names but I have not made a choice yet.

"It's not really important, you know. It doesn't matter what the baby is called as long as it's a healthy baby. That's all that matters."

McTeer has made a policy of being at her husband's side throughout his political career but in recent days the strain has been beginning to tell.

"I've only had about two hours sleep in the past 24 hours. I must confess I am a bit weary. I'm afraid I'm not at my best."

She was, however, bright and gay while shaking hands with many Victorians in the crowd in Centennial Square Wednesday.

McTEER

The women were asking how she was feeling and wanted to know when the baby would be born. (Late October.)

The men said they justed wanted to meet her out of curiosity.

Now 24, she married Clark on June 30, 1973, when she was 21 and he was 34. She was brought up in Cumberland, Ont., a bilingual community in the Ottawa Valley, and has helped her Alberta-born husband to learn French.

Her speeches to small meetings in Quebec in French are credited by political observers for her husband's strong showing in that province during the Conservative leadership convention in February.

Clark is believed to have run third among Quebec delegates on the first ballot (behind Claude Wagner and Brian Mulroney) and this gave him the early strength he needed to mount a serious challenge in later ballots.

He is slightly more than average height while she is almost as tall, has broad shoulders, dark hair and blue eyes.

Housing Hearing A Biggie

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

For about four hours Wednesday night 120 residents of the Rockland and Fairfield areas pleaded with Victoria city council not to allow townhouse development in their neighborhoods..

It was one of the biggest public hearings at City Hall since the fierce battles waged against developers by the James Bay Community Association several years ago, and many of the arguments had a familiar ring to them.

Concerns about overly high density, traffic probelms and possible harm to the neighborhood quality of life were mentioned as objector followed objector, most of them greeted by warm rounds of applause.

But they left the meeting unaware of the outcome, because with two aldermen absent council tabled the bylaws for a week until all members can be present for the vote.

The Rockland hearing concerned an application for a land-use contract by Tod-Hackett Construction Ltd., to allow the firm to build nine townhouses on Pemberton Road.

The three-quarter-acre site is immediately north of the Rockland Square townhouse project now nearing completion by another developer, and this was repeatedly cited as an example of the type of development which detracts from Rockland's heavily-treed beauty.

Architec for both schemes is John Di Castri. He was criticized by some speakers who claimed assurances given on the earlier development, that the maximum number of trees would be retained, had not been honored.

Di Castri said several trees had to be removed to meet the site access requirements of the fire marshal.

John Graeme, of 990 Terrace, president of the Rockland Area Association, urged council not to approve the Tod-Hackett application until the effects and impact of the Rockland Square project can be property assessed.

He said several association members who had supported the earlier development proposal now regret that they did so because it has not turned out as they had been led to believe.

In his articulate address, Graeme tried to dispel the popular image of Rockland as an exclusive enclave for the wealthy. He said, amid laughter, that besides quality residences it has a mixture of nursing homes, apartments in converted homes "and even the odd condominium and bearded resident."

One of the beards in question belonged to young Guy Hawkins 1002 Carberry Gardens, who complained that the format of public hearings automatically places affected residents on the "defensive."

Hawkins, t car salesman, said he pays $85 a month rent for his apartment suite in a building with nine other tenants where the stairs creak, the plumbing makes weird noises and everyone likes it that way.

He could afford to live in more modern surroundings, he said, but he prefers the special qualities of Rockland. "All the people who live there like it the way it is."

Commented Ald. Bob Wright, wryly: "If you people are on the defensive I would sure hate to be around when you're on the attack."

Roger Walker, 830 Pemberton, was one of several speakers who voiced concern about the "domino" or "leapfrogging" theory, where the intrusion of multiple-family development into a single-family area is used to justify further, similar development.

"Every new development is the next 'fringe,' and so on and so on," he added. "How far will this leapfrogging effect go?"

Ald. Ron McKenzie said the established residents of all areas urge municipalities to leave their neighborhoods alone, but the people who would live in the new developments have no say at all. Where were the younger couples and those without accommodation going to live?

Walker replied that the Tod-Hackett townhouses would probably sell for about $70,000 each and "I don't think they are places for people starting out in life."

There were fewer objectors to the rezoning application by Tech Designed Homes Ltd., which proposes to build six two-storey townhouses on a site of nearly 10,000 square feet on Chamberlain Street.

Ted Bowers, consultant to the applicant, said the complex would act as a "buffer" between the single-family homes on the street and the Chamberlain Walk commercial-residential building.

But Larry McDermott, 1009 Chamberlain, said the commercial building is already an "insult" and the townhouses would merely "add injury to insult."

One resident said parking on the street is already a serious problem, and the proposed development would merely compound it. Another said its semi-stuccoed exterior would not be in keeping with the quality of adjoining homes.

Accident Victim Critical

Two Colwood men were sent to hospital, one in criticial condition, after a motorcycle they were riding crashed into a pole on the Old Island Highway near Shoreline Road Wednesday night.

A spokesman for Victoria General Hospital said this morning Stan Furber, 29, of 180 Atkins, was in critical condition while Steven Brotherston, 25, of 1253 Goldstream, was in fair condition.

Colwood RCMP said Furber, the driver of the bike, apparently lost control of the vehicle on a gravel shoulder and spun into the pole. The accident occurred at 11:02 p.m.

Q. Do you know if chelation therapy for arteries is administered anywhere in B.C. or elsewhere in Canada? In the U.S. it is very expensive. — E.S.

A. Material which you forwarded describes this theray as use of chemical to extract calcium from the substances which cause hardening of the arteries, thus breaking down the blockages. Local medical sources say the treatment is not available in this country as far as they know and add that they believe it to be based on a false premise, that removal of calcium will solve the problem. They note arteries can be blocked by substances which contain no calcium.

Variety and People In Gussie's Career

Mrs. "Gussie" Newton-White, administrator of Saanich's mental health centre at 4514 West Saanich Road, retires June 28 after a varied professional career which began "on the edge of civilization" in Saskatchewan.

"I taught in a log school and lived in a log house. My pay was $30 a month," she recalls. "Although, actually, all I got was $200 a year."

At the time, she said, she lodged with a family of three, "living mainly on turnips and blueberries".

She doesn't regret those days because they allowed her "to appreciate the benefits we have now."

She did a stint with the Royal Canadian Air Force's women's division during the Second World War, teaching aircraft recognition to air gunners.

After the war she studied at UBC and became a social worker.

In 1949 she started work at the provincial department of health's child guidance clinic in Vancouver, transferring to its Victoria countepart in January, 1952.

She's been with the Saanich centre since January, 1970, and took charge of the centre two years ago.

She frankly admits, with retirement close at hand, there are times she wishes she hated her job.

"You get quite attached to people," she explains, "Now when people come in I realise I won't see them again. It gives you a sad feeling."

She isn't prepared, however, to completely cut the ties between her and the people she's helped overthe years.

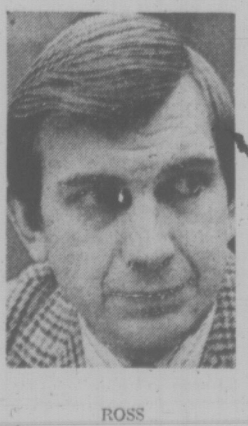
Power Cut On Island

A malfunction in a transformer on the Mainland which feeds power to Vancouver Island caused power failures in an area spreading from Victoria to Campbell River today.

Some users were without power for as long as two hours while others had power again within as little as 12 minutes.

A B.C. Hydro spokesman said the power failure was a recurrence of the same problems that caused last Friday's power failures.



ROSS

ROSS TAKES OVER AT BRENTWOOD

The chairman of the Greater Victoria School Board, William Ross, will take over as headmaster of Brentwood College, replacing David MacKenzie who retires Friday after 15 years.

A former lieutenant in the Canadian Navy, MacKenzie is largely credited with refounding the exclusive private school in 1961, 14 years after the original school buildings had been destroyed in a fire.

Over the years the school has grown from 90 students and seven teachers to 325 students and a full-time staff of 24. Sixty student will graduate Friday.

MacKenzie is expected to return to the school as a teacher after a one-year sabbatical.

Sooke Vote Anticipated To Be Close

Eric Butler, chairman of a chamber of commerce committee promoting municipal incorporation for Sooke, said today he anticipates a close decision when residents vote on it next Tuesday.

The main advantage Butler sees in having Sooke classified as a municipality rather than an electoral area is the shift to local control, having a council of local people deal with local problems.

But for most of the 200 people who turned out for an information meeting at Sooke community hall Wednesday night, the critical question appeared to be: would it increase taxes?

They peppered Tom Moore of the provincial municipal affairs department with questions, most of them related to taxes and sewage disposal.

"If you have more services, it will cost more," he told them.

John Tregear, a consulting engineer als on the chamber committee, assured residents that services such as sewers, lights an d roads would not be pushed on them but would first go to a vote.

An estimated 2,500 people are eligible to vote. They must be 19 years old, residents in Sooke for at least six months and in Canada for a year, Canadian citizens or British subjects.

There will be an advance poll Monday afternooon in the community hall dining room, in the centre of the village.

Voting Tuesday, from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., will be at the community hall at the Catholic church opposite Edward Milne high school and at The Pantry in the Juan de Fuca auto court near Kemp Lake Road.

Thief's Choice Right in Focus

Whoever broke into Studio 35 photography shop at 1246 Esquimalt Road Monday night and stole $5,200 worth of equipment knew what he was doing and what he was after, Esquimalt police said today.

Sgt. Doug Spoxton said the thief took only the very best — a complete Hasalblad outfit generally considered the Rolls Royce of the cameras.

Missing were a Hasselblad camera body, lenses, magazines, meters, extension tube, filters screens a tripod coupler, tote bag and even a neck strap.

Police are mystified how the thief got in or out of the shop, located above Mayor Art Young's meat market and almost directly across the street from the police station.

Sproxton said there was no sign of forced entry.

Two doctors' offices were entered at 777 Blanshard about 11 p.m., but offenders frightened off empty-handed by a resident of the building.

TARGET: FERRY RATES

EMERY

A concerted campaign against the ferry rate increases will be waged by the incoming executive of Victoria Chamber of Commerce, president-elect Alan Emery said today.

Emery, who will succeed Jack Hutchins on July 1, said studies will be launched to support the chamber's case that the ferry system is an extension of the highways and should not be expected to make money.

"The ferries should not be free but the fares should be much lower than they are," he said.

"A family cannot afford to go to Vancouver very often if they must pay $44 for the return trip," Emery said.

The incoming executive will also restructure the committee system and will divide the government affairs committee into three committees — one each for municipal, provincial and federal problems.

Emergy was born in Edmonton and has been active in the chamber since coming here six years ago. He is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Branson, Emery and Carfra.

Also on the new executive will be John Ansell, executive vice-president, and vice-presidents Bob Harvey, Egon Baumann and Bruce Walker.

New York

AT NEW YORK the stock market advanced sharply in active trading Thursday, bearing down once again on the 1,000 level in the Dow Jones industrial average.

The Dow average of 30 blue chips was up 11.05 at 999.67 at 2 p.m., and gainers held a 3-to-1 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Dow has crossed 1,000 briefly a half dozen times this year and last closed above that point at 1,001.10 on May 13.

Brokers said there were several favorable influences behind the gains. For one, they noted continuing moves by the federal reserve board that seemed to be aimed at keeping interest rates from rising any further.

In addition, analysts pointed to positive trends that showed up Wednesday in U.S. government reports on housing starts, personal income and industrial production.

NYSE volume reached 17.09 million shares by mid-afternoon, up from 13.89 million at the same point Wednesday.

Montreal

AT MONTREAL prices were mixed in moderate trading. Volume at 2:30 p.m. was 431,600 shares compared with 659,500 shares traded up to the same time Wednesday. Massey-Ferguson Ltd. was up ⅜ at $29½, Imperial Oil Ltd. A ⅝ at $23½ and Inco A Ltd. ⅜ at $34¼. Walker-Gooderham and Worts Ltd. was off ¼ at $3¾, Moore Corp. Ltd. ⅛ at $4 and Shell Canada Ltd. ¼ at $17⅝.

London

AT LONDON mining issues, particulary those of heavyweight South Africa gold producers, were sharply lower in moderate trading on the London stock market Thursday. The Financial Times Index fell 6.5 to 378.5 at mid-session trading. It later rallied and closed at 379.8. Canadian issues eased fractionally. Analysts said the drop in mines was caused by news of civil disturbances in South Africa.
